PREFACE

In the present monograph an attempt has been made to study the origin and development of the Nirukta or the Science of Etymology, of which Yaska's treatise remains the sole extant representative, from a critical and historical viewpoint. Oriental scholars have studied Yāska's work with much critical acumen and there are numerous papers written by eminent scholars dealing with the various aspects of that work-viz. historical, philological, textual and so on. Professor Sköld's treatise entitled "The Nirukta: Its place in Old Indian Literature" is mainly devoted to the discussion of the etymologies recorded in the Nirukta and as to how far those can be traced to the Brahmana-texts. Yet no attempt has been made, so far, to give a complete and unified picture of the pre-Yaska stage of the etymological science and an account of the eminent Etymologists (Nairuktas) who were the first originators of that branch of study, though stray articles have appeared at intervals. Here is presented a sustained historical study pooling all possible and available data bearing on the contributions of Yaska's predecessors. Incidentally the problem of authorship of the Nighantu has been dealt with. It has also been endeavoured to show that the first germs of the etymological science are contained in the Brahmana works themselves-a fact which is admitted by Yaska himself by his frequent quotations of Brahmana passages in support of his etymologizings. The character of the lost and anonymous work called the Niruktavārttika has also been discussed threadbare by utilizing all the available data. In the last section a comparison has been made among the three principal schools of Vedic exegesis—viz. the Aitihāsika, the Ādhyātmika and the Nairukta, showing how the adoption of any of these views would entail a corresponding difference in the interpretation of Vedic mantras. Some portions of the present monograph were published as separate articles in different oriental journals. It was awarded the Griffith Memorial Prize in Letters for 1947 of the Calcutta University.

I. YĀSKA'S NIRUKTA

Of the six ancillary sciences the Nirukta or the Science of Etymology, as it is commonly designated, is very important, and, as Yāska states, it is almost a hopeless task to make out the sense of Vedic mantras without a thorough acquaintance with the Nirukta and its methods.1 It supplements the grammatical science which goes only a half way towards the proper understanding of the Vedas². Of this important branch of literature, however, all other works have been lost save this work of Yaska, which seems to have been the product of a later period of development of that science. It is apparent after a perusal of Yāska's work that the author has utilised the labours and findings of his famous predecessors. Yäska frequently mentions the names of older authors and quotes their views either in his support or to show their divergence. We would later on cite the names of the authors and schools occuring in Yaska's work.

It is generally held that Yāska preceded Pāṇini, the great grammarian, on the strength of the sūtra Yaskādibhyo gotre (II. 4. 63) occuring in the latter's Aṣṭādhyāyī, in which the formation of the patronymic Yāska is taught. But this sūtra alone cannot prove the anteriority of Yāska, for it cannot be held with certitude that Pāṇini had in view the author of our Nirukta in framing his aphorism, and there might have been other Yaskas. The conclusion based on the evidence of the above sūtra can at most be tentative in nature3. Prof. Goldstücker in his Panini and his Place in Sanskrit Literature observes, "such, I hold, is afforded by the fact that Pāṇini knows the name of Yaska, for he teaches the formation of this word and heads a gana with it. And as we know at present of but one real Yaska in the whole ancient literature, a doubt as to the identity of the author of the Nirukta and the family chief adduced by Panini, would have first to be supported with plausible arguments before it could be assented to."4 At the end of the fourteenth chapter of the Nirukta there is a salutation to Yaska,5 which goes to prove that the author of the Nirukta is not the only Yaska. He had ancestors of the same name. But such a conclusion, though plausible at the first sight, cannot be stressed too much in view of the fact that modern researches have proved the spurious character of the last Book of the Nirukta, which has not been commented upon by Durgācārya, whose gloss breaks off with Chapter XIII.

There are however some points to be noted with regard to the chronological relation between Yāska and Pāṇini though it is apparent on the face of it that the science of grammar and linguistics had made great strides during the period between these two great teachers. There can be very little room for doubt that Yāska preceded Pāṇini from the consideration of philological and linguistic grounds. But it may not be absolutely useless to discuss some points which appear to have some bearing on their exact relation.⁶

Of the five important rules7 which occur in Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī and which form as it were the 'keystone' of his Grammar, as Professor Goldstücker remarks, the first is tadaśisyam samjñā-pramānatvāt (I. 5. 53), which we should consider carefully. After having taught the formation of such words as varanah, pañcalah, kuravah etc. when they refer to "the countries inhabited by varanas, pancalas, and kurus etc.", by the rule lupi yuktavad vyaktivacane (I. 2. 51), Panini says in the rules above quoted that "Or rather, the rule I. 2. 51 need not be taught for the formation of such words as varanah etc., as these are conventional names or samiñās and they are bound to take such and such genders and numbers according to usage".8

Patañjali the author of the Māhābhāṣya has commented on this sūtra which we cite in our notes for reference. Prof. Goldstücker in his work already cited draws certain important inferences from Patañjali's comments on this sūtra, which are of far-reaching importance. They are:

- "(1) That its Grammar does not treat of those samjñās or conventional names which are known and settled otherwise.
- "(2) That this term samjñā must be understood in our rule to concern only such conventional names as have an etymology.
- "(3) That such terms as ti, ghu, and bha were known and settled before Pāṇini's Grammar but that, nevertheless, they were defined by Pāṇini because they are not etymological terms."

"Having thus obtained", proceeds Prof. Glodstücker, "through the comment of Patañjali on the sūtra in question, a means by which to judge of the originality of Pāṇini's terms, we must feel induced to test its accuracy before we base our inferences on it; and the opportunity of doing so is afforded not merely by the technical symbols which Patañjali himself names,—we easily ascertain that Pāṇini has given a definition of them,—but also by another of these important five sūtras. The sūtra(1. 2. 56) says: Nor shall I teach the purport of the principal part of a compound (pradhāna), or that of an affix (pratyaya), because they too have been settled by others (i.e. people know already from other authorities, that in a compound the sense of the word gravitates towards its principal part, and in a derivative word towards the affix)."

If this interpretation of Patañjali's coments be correct we are able to view the relation between Yāska and Pāṇini in quite a new light. Now, Yāska has used the term upadhā in his work in just the same sense in which Pāṇini uses it. The term upadhā occurs thrice in the Nirukta. The occurences are being cited below:

i. athāpyupadhālopo bhavati-jagmatur

jagmur iti (II.1)

ii. athāpyupadhāvikāro bhavati-rājā

dandīti (II.1)

iii. ādinā'bhyāsena upahitena upadhām

adatte (IV. 12)

Similarly, the term abhyāsa also has been used by Yāska in the sense in which Pāṇini uses it. It occurs in Nir. II. 2, 3; V.12; X.42. The term abhyāsta, a derivative of abhyāsa, is also met with in the Nirukta in II.12; III.10; IV.23, 25; and VI.3. The term guṇa is also found in Nirukta X.17 denoting the "strong grade" (e, o) of the vowels i, u, which is the sense Pāṇini attaches to it. Thus, if Prof. Goldstücker's deductions be accepted, these evidences form to make a strong presumption in favour of the view that Yāska might have come after Pāṇini. For, the terms upadhā, abhyāsa, etc. are all derivatives, and if Yāska be held to be anterior to Pāṇini, it becomes difficult to explain why the latter should frame special rules for teaching their senses inasmuch as they had already been known from other sources. Though it is apparent on linguistic ground, as has already been remarked, that Yāska belongs to a much earlier period than Pāṇini, still the issue raised here demands special investigation before Yāska's priority can be fully taken for granted.

- The grammatical terms used by Yāska in his Nirukta are more or less descriptive whereas those used by Pāṇini are in the majority of cases technical (yadrcchika). Note for example—kārita, carkarīta, cikīrsita, nāmakaraņa, nivettisthāna, dvipraketisthāna etc., which are extremely simple and self-explanatory. Moreover, Yaska never uses such self-improvised symbols as ti, ghu, bha, etc. which are found in abundance in Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī. These are certainly evidences pointing to Yaska's priority. As Dr. Belvalkar remarks: "Unfortunately the time of Yāska is by no means yet certain. It depends for the most part on the date that is to be assigned to Pāṇini, between whom and this great writer at least a century, if not more, must be supposed to have elapsed in order to account for all the advances in the matter and wording of the rules of grammar that are to be met with in the Astādhyāyī."—Systems of Sanskrit Grammar, pp. 6-7. II. YĀSKA AND ŚĀKALYA

It is very interesting to investigate how far Yaska follows Śakalya—the author of the Padatext of the Rgveda, regarding the interpretaion of Vedic verses. That Śakalya preceded the author of the Nirukta and that the latter was quite aware of Śakalya's text are plain, since Yaska mentions Śakalya by name in Nir. VI. 28. The text runs thus:

"'vane na vāyo nyadhāyi cākan' (RV. X. 29.1;
AV. XX. 76.1) | vana iva | vayo veḥ putraḥ | cāyanniti
vā | kāmayamāna iti vā | veti ca ya iti ca cakāra
Śākalyaḥ | udāttam tvevam ākhyātam abhavisyat |

asusamā ptaś cārthah |."

Here Yāska criticises Śākalya for wrongly splitting up the single word vāyo into vā and yah, for then the verb would be accented, though it is actually enclitic, being in a subordinate clause. What is more, the sense of the passage would then be incomplete. Śaunaka—the author of the Brhaddevatā, alludes to the interpretation of Yāska and seems to suggest that the author of the Nirukta had an erroneous conception regarding the accent of the verb adhāyi, thus defending Śākalya against Yāska's attack. Professor Macdonell has been at a loss to make out from what standpoint Śaunaka was criticising Yaska. As he states: 'If our author is criticizing Yāska, it does not appear what he means here by a misunderstanding of the accent.'2 But Skandasvāmin, whose gloss on the Nirukta has been edited by Professor L. Sarup, appears to defend Śākalya. According to him in the verse quoted above, viz. RV. X. 2 9. 1, the word cakan is a verb and not an inflexional form in the nominative, which as it is construed with the subject yah becomes unaccented, being in the principal clause. Thus there is nothing wrong even if we accept Śākalya's view and split up vāyah into vā and yah. Śaunaka, in the verse referred to, might have the same interpretation in view and thus it becomes quite evident why he should be criticizing Yaska, who completely misunderstood Śākalya.3 Professor Sköld in his treatise, however, interprets the text of the Brhaddevatā in quite a different way, which is not at all convincing. He remarks: 'BD accuses Yaska of misunderstanding the accent. Professor Macdonell l. c., p. 63, seems not to have caught the point of the criticism, which probably is, that, if vayo (vāyas) were one word, meaning "bird", it would not have been stressed in that way, as the similar word for "bird" vayas, is differently accentuated.'4

In the Brhaddevatā Śaunaka refers to another mistake on the part of the author of the Nirukta in the splitting up of the Saṃhitā text. Here Yāska is accused of dividing the word pūruṣādaḥ (RV. X. 27. 22) as pūruṣān adanāya (i. e. puruṣa/adaḥ). But Śākalya in his Padapāṭha has done the same thing and it is difficult to guess why Śaunaka would be attacking Yāska. Neither Durga nor Skandaswāmin has referred to the view of the author of the Bṛhaddevatā. Thus Professor Macdonell observes: 'Yāska in Nirukta II. 6 explains pūruṣādaḥ as pūruṣān adanāya, "in order to devour men", but there is nothing in this to justify the criticism that he took pūruṣādaḥ as two words'.6

Yāska, in his explanation of the Rk verse I. 195. 18—'aruno māsakṛt vṛkah'—also, goes against the Padapāṭha. Yāska explains māsakṛt as māsānām kartā thus treating it as a compound of the two words māsa-kṛt, while Śākalya shows them as two separate and uncompounded words mā and sakṛt. Skandaswāmin in his commentary on Nirukta V. 21 observes that Yāska here followed some other authority in whose opinion the word māsakṛt is a compound and not Śākalya who views them as two distinct terms. Who this authority was it is not possible to find out. There might have been some other authors of Pada Texts besides Śākalya whose Padapāṭha alone is now extant. Professor Bhagavaddatta in his History of Vedic Literature quotes a verse from the Brahmānda-Purāna 1. 2. 34 in which Rathītara (Śākapūṇi) and Bharadvāja Vāskali are mentioned as redactors of different recensions of the Rgveda besides Śākalya. Thus Yāska might have been following any of these recensions.

Skandaswāmin in his commentary on the Nirukta, makes some observations in a few more cases where Yāska and Śākalya either differ or agree. We might refer to these instances in order to bring into clear light the dependence of Yāska on Śākalya's Pada-text.

I. In deriving āditya in Nirukta 11. 13 Yāska proposes several alternative explanations. The text runs as: 'ādityaḥ kasmāt? ādatte rasān, ādatte bhāsam jyotisām | ādīpto bhāsā iti vā | aditeh putra iti vā /'. Thus according to the first three etymologies the word should be treated as a compound of the preposition \bar{a} - with ditya derived either from $\sqrt{d\bar{a}}$ or from $\sqrt{d\bar{i}p}$, and as such should be shown in the Padapatha divided by an avagraha. But if the last etymology be accepted, there need be no avagraha at all. Skandaswāmin remarks that Yaska here follows Śākalya and Ātreya on the one hand and Gārgya on the other-all authors of Pada Texts, the first two teachers regarding the word as uncompounded and the last, viz. Gargya dividing it by an avagraha, thus indicating his acceptance of any one of the first three etymologies as proposed in the Nirukta.¹⁰

- II. In explaining the Nighantu word mehana (Ngh. IV. 1. 4) which occurs in RV. V. 39. 1: 'yad indra citra mehanāsti tvādātam adrivah', Yāska refers to the two conflicting views of Śākalya and Gārgya, the authors of the Pada Texts of the Rk-Samhita and the Sama-Samhita respectively. According to the former mehanā is a single indivisible word meaning mamhaniyam, while in Gargya's opinion there is no such word, but as a result of the euphonic combination of the three words ma-iha-na we get mehana.11 Thus we find that Yaska refers to both the views as equally authoritative. A comparison of the different Padapāthas with Yāska's exegesis would yield a good idea as to how far Yaska's interpretations were conditioned by the varying methods of division of the Samhita followed by the authors of the Pada Texts.12
- III. Another instance where Yāska seems to go against Śākalya is to be found in Nirukta IV. 25. Yāska here deals with the accent of the two words asyāh and asya. When they are used to stand for some principal word in the sentence, they retain their usual accent, but if they are used in a subordinate sense or anaphorically, they become enclitic. To illustrate the use of asyāḥ where it is usually accented, Yāska quotes RV. I. 138. 4: asyā ū ṣu ṇa upa sātaye bhuvo' helamāno rarivā ajāśva, and explains it as asyai naḥ sātaye upabhava, thus suggesting that the correct Padapāṭha would be asyai | u and not asyāḥ | u as Śākalya has it. But Skandasvāmin in his commentary remarks that this is not a proper procedure as this would be violating the Pada Text which expressly reads asyāḥ in the genitive singular. So the proper reading of the Nirukta would be asyāḥ naḥ sātaye, the reading asyai naḥ sātaye being spurious and unjustifiable.¹³

IV. Yāska in Nir. V. 15 explains āritah (Ngh.) as pratyrtah. Durga observes that in the word āritaḥ, ā is the preposition used in the sense of prati and so Yaska explains it by pratyrtah (prati-rtah).14 But contrary to this Śākalya shows no avagraha between ā and ritah which ought to have been infixed had Yaska's explanation been endorsed by Śākalya too. But we are to note that Skandaswamin here offers a different interpretation. In his opinion, āritaḥ according to Yāska is the past participle derived from the frequentative stem of the root v'r 'to go'. That Yaska explains it by pratyrtah should not lead us to think that in aritah a is the preposition used in lieu of prati, as some have been led to think. Thus, Skandaswāmin sees no divergence in the views of Yāska and Śākalya.¹⁵

V. In Nirukta XI. 16 Yaska quotes RV. V. 57. 1, the last foot of which reads trsnaje na diva utsā udanyave. Yāska explains it as: trsnaja iva diva utsā udanyave iti | tṛṣṇak tṛṣyater udanyur udanyateh. Thus it becomes evident that in Yāska's opinion tṛṣṇaje occurring in the versefoot already cited is in the dative of the stem trsnaj which is a derivative of the root v trs. But this is not the opinion of Śākalya, for in the Padapātha of the above verse trsnaje is divided by an avagraha, which indicates its composite character.16 Sākalya, thus, thought the word to be a compound of trsna-ja, the last member being evidently derived from vian. Accordingly, Yāska and Śākalya are at variance on this point too.

VI. Yāska in Nir. XI. 25 cites RV. X. 108.

1: 'kam icchantī saramā predam ānat dūre hyadhvā jagurih parācaih | kāsmehitih kā paritakmyāsīt katham rasāyā atarah payāmsi'. In explaining the last foot Yāska states: 'katham rasāyāh atarah payāmsīti | rasā nadī, rasateh sabdakarmanah | kathamrasāni tāni udakānīti vā |'. In the first explanation Yāska takes rasā to refer to 'a stream', and the last foot would then mean: 'How did you cross the waters of the Rasā?' Thus here rasāyāh is one indivisible word used in the genitive. This is also the view of Śākalya, who splits up the words as: katham / rasāyāh | atarah | payāmsi. But the second explanation offered by Yaska cannot proceed from Śākalya's Padapātha. Yāska now takes katham-rasā as a compound form referring to payāmsi. yā now would refer to payāmsi with the accusative plural ending -ni dropped.17 The Padapatha in this view would be as follows: katham-rasā | yā | atarah | payāmsi. The hiatus in yā atarah has to be accounted for by the optional character of euphonic combination in the Vedas. Skandasvamin here remarks that the second explanation of the Bhāṣyakāra (viz. Yāska) might have been in accordance with a different recension of the Rk-Samhitā.18

VII. Yāska in Nir. XII.46 explains rodasī as rudrasya patnī in the verse: uta gnā vyantu devapatnīr indrāny-agnāyy-aśvinī rāṭ | ā rodasī varunānī śrnotu vyantu devīr ya rtur janīnām |- RV. V. 46. 8. But in the Padapātha it is followed by iti and treated as a pragṛhya word which shows that according to Śākalya rodasī has the dual case-ending and refers to dyāvā-pṛthivī. Durga comments that Yāska follows the Atharvaveda, in which this verse occurs (cp. AV. VIII. 49. 2), where rodasī is not treated as a pragṛhya word. Thus here evidently Yāska follows the Atharvaveda tradition against Śākalya's decree. Skandasvāmin does not fail to point out Yāska's error, for rodasī accented as it is on the first syllable can refer only to heaven and earth as Śākalya's Padapātha justly suggests.²⁰

VIII. In RV. IV. 32. 23: 'kanīnakeva vidradhe nave drupade arbhake | babhrū yāmesu śobhete', which is cited by Yaska in Nir. IV. 1, all the four words vidradhe, nave, drupade and arbhake are according to Śākapūni locative singulars, which is also the opinion of Śākalya since in the Pada-text they are not followed by iti which is put after dual forms ending in $\bar{\imath}$, \bar{u} and e. But Yaska does not concur with this view of Śākapūņi. According to him the two words nave and arbhake are dual forms as they qualify kaninake which is in the dual and not drupade as Śākalva and Sākapūni contend. So in Yāska's view these two words should be treated as pragrhya in the Padapātha-i.e., they should be followed by the particle iti to denote their dual character. Thus, here too, Yaska differs from Śākalva.21

IX. Yāska in his Nir. IV. 12 quotes RV. I. 6. 7: 'indreṇa saṃ hi dṛkṣase saṃjagmāno abibhyuṣā | mandū samānavarcasā' and explains mandū as madiṣṇū—nominative dual or instrumental singular, the first view being that of Śākalya as it is treated as pragṛhya in the

Padapāṭha and the second of some other Vedic teacher, a Padakāra perhaps, who did not put iti after it, thus indicating that it was a singular form and not a dual one.²²

It is highly probable that in Yāska's time more than one Pada Text of the Rgveda existed and that Yāska consulted them in recording the different interpretations to which a Vedic stanza might be subjected.

Durga too seems to suggest that in some recensions the expression māsakrt was treated as a compound, in others as two separate words. III. YĀSKA—THE AUTHOR OF THE NIGHAŅŢU?

We must now turn to another important topic concerning the authorship of the extant Nighantu. The Nighantu as it is now published consists of five chapters, the first three of which are called the Naighantuka section; the fourth chapter is known as the Naigama-kanda or Aikapadika-kānda, and the last chapter passes under the designation Daivata-kānda. Professor H. Sköld in his treatise has tried to establish that the term nighantu at first applied to the first three chapters of the present compilation as it is evident from the sectional title Naighantukakānda, but later on it was extended also to the last two sections-viz. Naigama and Daivatakāndas, by a fallacy commonly known as pars pro toto. As he observes: 'How can the first Kānda of our Nighantu have given its name to the whole work ?....I think by a sort of pars pro toto. There are reasons for believing that the Nighāntuka-kānda is the earliest part of the Nighantu. This, together with its being placed at the head of the work, leads to a later change of name. An atha nighantavah at the beginning of the MSS. of the Nighantu may have been taken to refer to the whole work, while the colophons at the end of the $k\bar{a}ndas$ preserved their old names. The fact, that in our days, not only the first $k\bar{a}nda$, but also the whole vocabulary bears the name of Nighantu can hardly be accounted for in any other way.'

Yaska at the very beginning of the Nirukta states: "The list of words is finished. now to be explained. This list of words is called Nighantu."2 On this Durga observes that the present collection of words had been compiled by various seers who culled from the Vedas obscure words with the purpose of grouping them together under definite sections.3 Durga also states that the term Nighantu is a conventional name, and it applies equally to those words which have not been compiled at all, to compilations other than the present one, as also to our list on which Yaska had based his Nirukta. Thus from Durga's observation it would not be wrong to deduce that there were other Nighantus also, in which occurred vocables that were not to be met with in our text.4 This deduction is also confirmed by another observation of Durga where it is plainly stated that Yāska in his Nirukta explains not only those words which have been read in the extant Nighantu but also words which occurred in other Nighantu-texts as well. It might however be legitimately objected: Why all those words have not been incorporated in the present text of the Nighantu? To this Durga answers by remarking that it would be a hopeless task to make a complete list of all possible vocables. The present Nighantu and the commentary thereoni.e. the Nirukta, are merely intended to give an idea, howsoever insufficient, as to the methods and principles of etymology and Vedic exegesis, so that the students might be enabled to comprehend by themselves in the light of the teachings of the Nirukta the meaning of obscure Vedic passages.⁵ It is evident from the observations of Durga, cited above, that the Nighantu, on which Yaska commented, was existent long before the latter wrote his commentary thereon. Elsewhere in Nirukta IV. 18, where Yaska explains the two words davane and akūpārasya read in Nighantu (IV.1.32-33), Durga states explicitly that Yaska is quite a different person from the author of the Nighantu, since whereas in the Nighantu the above two words are read in the order shown above Yaska in his commentary explains them according to the sequence in which they occur in the verse of the Rgveda. Had Yaska been numerically identical with the author of the Nighantu, Durga observes, would be difficult to account for as why in the Nighantu he should changing the sequence of these words as observed in the mantra without any reason whatsoever.6 A similar instance, where Yāska does not observe the sequence of the Nīghantu, is to be found in Nir. V. 15-where the two words vājapastyam and vājagandhyam are explained by Yaska.7 These considerations have led many scholars to hold that the authorship of the Nighantu has to be attributed to Yāska's predecessors. Professor R. D. Karmarkar, however, would go further and would not even concede that the Nighantu itself is the product of a single author. There are in the Nighanțu various repetitions-viz., a word which occurs in the Naighantuka-kānda occurs in the Naigama-kānda as well, a word occurs in its derivative form even though its root is enumerated in the list, there being no semantic change noticeable. We might quote Professor Karmarkar's own words to make our point clear: "Nor does the Nighantu seem to be the work of only one author. Thus for instance, the author of the second section of the Fourth Adhyāya of the Nighantu is clearly different from the author of the first three Adhyayas, as shown from the fact that the second section of the fourth Adhyāya gives certain words, the meanings of which have already been given in the first three Adhyāyas. Thus andhah IV.2.6, varāhah IV.

2.21, svasarāni IV.2.22, śaryah IV.2.23, sinam IV.2.28, vayunam IV.2.48, are already explained in II.7.1, I.10.13, I.9.5, II.5.5, II.7.8, III.9.10 respectively. It is clear therefore that the author of the second section of the fourth Adhyaya was not aware of the first three Adhyavas." Another reason for holding that the Nighantu is not the unified work of a single work is that there is a lack of homogeneity in the method of citation of words. As the same scholar has shown: "In the fourth Adhyaya of the Nighantu, there are eight pairs of consecutive words occurring in some Rgvedic passages, out of which (1) two occur in IV.1-davane akūparasya, IV.1.32, 33; and vidradhe drupade-IV.1.18, 89; (2) two occur in IV.2-bāhisthah dūtah, IV. 2.2, 3; and kūtasya carsanih, IV.2.70-71; and (3) four occur in IV. 3 anavāyam kimīdine, IV.3.43-44; śrustī purandhih, IV.3.50-51; canah pacatā IV.3.64-65; sadānve śirimbithah, IV.3.119-120; In the case of the first section, the exact words occurring in the passage are taken, though the order is changed in the case of davane akūpārasya. In the case of the second section bāhistho dūto in the passage has been reduced to its original bahisthah and dutah. But in the case of the third section, while anavayam kimīdine and canaḥ pacatā are taken unchanged, śrustī purandhih and sadānve śirimbithah are substituted for purandhim and sirimbithasya of the original passage. If one can keep in tact dāvane akūpārasya in IV.1, one fails to understand why sirimbithasya should lose its genitive or purandhim its accusative. It is clear therefore that the third section must not have been produced by the author of the first section of the fourth Adhyāya."

Durga too was aware of this repetition in the Nighanțu and in some cases tried to justify the recurrence of certain vocables with somewhat strained arguments. For example, in commenting on Nir. V.1 in which andhaḥ (Ngh. II.7) is explained, Durga remarks: "Though this word is read as a synonym of anna in Nighanṭu II.7, still it is read here (Ngh. IV.2.6) on account of the variety of meanings it can yield." A similar observation is made by him under Nir. V.5.9

Professor Bhagavaddatta however has tried to establish, contrary to the opinion of Durga, that the authors of the Nighantu and the Nirukta are numerically identical. In support of his theory, he cites the views of Madhusūdana Sarasvatī—the great Vedāntic teacher, and Dayānanda Sarasvatī, who held both the works viz. the Nighantu and the Nirukta, to be the handiwork of the self-same Yāska. Professor Bhagavaddatta states that the basis of Durga's theory concerning the difference in authorship of these two works is feeble. Durga's contention might have some force had both the wordsdāvane and akūpārasya occurred in the Rk-verse cited by Yaska alone and nowhere else. But this is not the case. It is true that akūpkrasya is met with only once in the RV .-- viz. in the verse cited in the Nirukta, but the other word is very frequent. So there can be no point in the argument that when Yaska read the two words in the Nirukta, he had the Rk-verse V.39.2 in view. Yāska could have as well cited any of the numerous verses in which the word davane is found to occur. But he has cited only the above verse in view of the fact that this single verse would simultaneously serve as an illustration of the use of both the words. Thus the change in the order cannot point to the numerical difference of the authors, as Durga would have it. 12

Durga, it seems, was led to uphold this mistaken view on the basis of a statement of Yāska himself in Nir. I.20, as the same Professor endeavours to show. The statement runs as;

"Upade'sāya glāyanto'vare bilmagrahanāya imam grantham samāmnāsisur vedam ca vedāngāni ca."

Durga held "this work" (imam grantham) to refer to the the extant Nighantu¹³, and this statement of Yāska, which prima facie alludes to the seers of old as the compilers of the text of the Nighantu, moulded Durga's view and was at the root of his confusion. But Yaska, by the expression imam grantham, only meant "works of this genre", referring in general to the Nighantu works that preceded him. That there were a good many Nighantu works besides the present one has become plain from Durga's owo observations already cited in the notes., and it would be made more clear when we come to consider the evidences embedded in the text of the Nirukta itself, which leave no doubt as to the conjecture that Yaska's Nighantu was compiled after the model of other Nighantu works. Besides, Yaska's own statement sets at rest all speculation regarding the authorship of the Nighantu. In Nir. VII.13, Yāska states:

"athāto'bhidhanaiḥ samyujya haviś codayati indrāya vṛtraghne | indrāya vṛtrature | indrāyāmhomuce iti | tānyapyeke samāmananti | bhūyāmsi tu samāmnānāt | yat tu samvijnānabhūtam syāt prādhānyastuti tat samāmane | athota karmabhir ṛṣir devatāḥ stauti vṛtrahā, purandaraḥ—iti | tānyapyeke samāmananti | bhūyāmsi tu sāmāmnānāt."14

Thus, in this passage, it is explicitly stated that some Niruktas read in the Daivata-kānḍa, besides the conventional names of the gods, also epithets that are usually applied to them. For example, besides Indra, which is the most widely known appellation of the chief deity of the atmospheric region, they compiled also such terms as vitrahā, purandarah etc., which are epithets of Indra. But such a procedure is not approved by Yāska. This would only swell the list. And so Yāska himself has included in the list of names of the deities such appellations alone as are conventional (samvijñā-nabhūtam) and by which they are addressed when an oblation is offered to them. This confession on the part of Yāska should leave not even the slightest trace of doubt as to the authorship of the Nighantu.

We might now sum up the conclusions arrived at in course of our discussion regarding the character and authorship of the Nighantu. (i) Firstly, the Nighantu, which is the designation under which the present compilation passes, is only a misnomer. As Professor Sköld has shown, Nighantu is only the name of the first kānda, in which is read synonymous vocables, 16 but later on it was applied to the last two sections as well by the process known as pars pro toto. (ii) Secondly, when Yaska speaks-"tam imam samāmnāyam nighantava ityācaksate", "tad aikapadikam ityācaksate", or "daivatam ityācakṣate", he thereby refers to the convention of the older teachers of the Nairukta school. 17 (iii) Thirdly, Yaska's own statement proves that the Nighanțu was his own compilation. (iv) Fourthly, there were other Nighanțu works too that preceded him and quotations from which occur in Yāska's Nirukta. (v) Fifthly, the repetitions of certain vocables in the extant Nighanțu cannot prove the thesis of multiple authorship as it is done with a definite object in view. (vi) And finally, every Nighanțu work,—which is a generic appellation, previous to Yāska's own text, consisted of three kānḍas or sections—viz. Naighanțuka, Aikapadika or Naigama, and Daivata, and Yāska was only following the traditional division instead of improvising new titles for his own work.

- 15. For a detailed discussion of the exact meaning of the terms samvijnāta and samvijnānabhūta one should refer to the late Professor Gune's article in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XLV., p.158, where he explains at great length the passage: "tad yatra svarasamskārau samarthau prādeśikena vikārena anvitau syātām samvijījātāni tāni—yathā gaur aśvah puruso hastīti"-Nir. 1.12. We should note that the term vijnana without the prefix sam is met with thrice in Katyayana's Varttikas under Panini's Sūtras V.1.59, V.2.59, and VII.1.2 respectively eompounded with prātipadika, and has the same sense as samvijñāna-viz. a conventional name. Compare: "anārambho vā prātipadikavijnānāt yathā sahasrādişu"-Vārttika under V.1.59, Note also the gloss of Patañjali thereon: "anārambho vā punar vimsatyādīnām nyāyyah / katham sidhyati? prātipadikavijnānāt / katham prātipadikavijnānam? vimsatyādayo'vyutpannāni prātipadikāni / yathā sahasrādisu / tad yathā sahasrādisu / na cānugamah kriyate, bhavati cabhidhanam".
- 16. According to Sayana the term Nighantu refers to a collection of synonymous vocables, while Hemacandra explains Nighantu simply as 'a collection of vocables' (not necessarily synonymous). Comp:

IV. EVIDENCES OF LOST NIGHANȚUS IN YĀSKA'S NIRUKTA & OTHER VEDIC EXEGETICAL WORKS

We have already stated in the preceding section that there were other Nirukta works besides the present Nirukta by Yaska and that every Nairukta author had an independent Nighantu text prefixed to his work which was based on the former. In compiling the vocables of the Nighantu, the authors were guided by their own discretion, and as such the number of vocables embodied in the different Nighantus varied as a matter of course. Yaska in his Nirukta eites a good many vocables that are not embodied in the Nighantu that constitutes the basis of his Bhāsva. That these vocables are taken from the lost Nighantus is testified by the manner of citing them. Whenever Yāska cites a Nighantu word in his commentary he tags on to it terms like -nāman or karman if the word be a substantive or a verbal form respectively. The following instances would make our point clear:-

 vavrir iti rūpanāma (Nir. II. 9)—vavri occurs in Ngh. III.7.

(ii) apna iti rūpanāma (Nir. III. 7)—vide Ngh. III. 7.

- (iii) bṛbūkam ityudakanāma—(Nir II. 22) vide Ngh. I. 22.
- (iv) manhater dānakarmanaḥ (Nir. I. 7) vide Ngh. III. 20.
 - (v) dāśater..dānakarmanah (Nir I. 7)—vide Ngh. III. 20.

But the following vocables which Yaska records in just the same way are not met with in the extant Nighantu:—

- (i) matsara iti lobhanāma—Nir. II. 5.
- (ii) vir iti sakunināma-Nir. II. 6.
- (iii) prathama iti mukhyanama-Nir. II. 22.
- (iv) suḥ iti prāṇanāma—Nir. III. 8.
- (v) svasti iti avināśanāma—Nir. III. 21.
- (vi) rapo ripram iti pāpanāmanī-Nir. IV. 21.
- (vii) śvātram iti kṣipranāma—Nir. V. 3.
- (viii) śamba iti vajranāma-Nir. V. 24.
 - (ix) tura iti yamanama—Nir. XII. 14.
- (x) daksateh samardhayatikarmanah—Nir. I. 7.
- (xi) daksater utsahakarmanah-Nir. I. 7.
- (xii) hrādateh sabdakarmanah-Nir. I. 9.
- (xiii) hladateh sītībhavakarmanah-Nir. I. 9.
- (xiv) dadāter dhārayatikarmanah—Nir. II. 2.
- (xv) ksiyater nivāsakarmanah—Nir. II. 6.
 - (xvi) bravīteh sabdakarmanah—Nir. II. 22.

Not that Yāska's Nirukta alone points to the existence of lost Nighantus. Evidences from other sources too prove the same thesis. The following vocables are not to be found in the extant Nighanțu in the sense which has been allotted to them by Uvața, the commentator of the Yajurveda:

- eha iti aparādhanāma—IV. 29.
- (ii) repa iti pāpanāma-V. 3.
- (iii) sṛka iti āyudhanāma—XVI. 61.
- (iv) ghṛṇir iti dīptināma-X. 10.

Similarly Bhattabhāskara in his Bhāṣya on the Taittirīya-Saṃhitā records new vocables that are not found in Yāska's Nighantu. Compare:—

- (i) viva iti dhananāma—Op. cit. Pt. II. pp. 69, 384.
- (ii) om, svāhā, svadhā, baṣat, nama iti pañca brhamano nāmāni.
- (iii) matir iti stutināma.
- (iv) gartam iti ratnanāma.
- (v) lekatir darsanakarmā.

If all the evidences strewn over the various Vedic works be collected together, we would be able to form an estimate as to the extent of the Nighantu literature that preceded Yāska and which formed the materials of Yāska's Nighantu, the only work of its kind now available to us.

V. THE BASIS OF THE NIRUKTA

We might now advert to another important topic. We know that the study of the Vedas along with the six ancillary sciences - viz. Phonetics (śiksā), Ritual Codes (kalpa), Grammar (vyākarana), Etymology (nirukta), Metre (chandas), and Astronomy (jyotiṣām ayanam), is laid down as a compulsory duty of every twice-born in the Brahmanic injunction: Brahmanena niskaranam vedo'dhyeyo'dhyāpayitavyasca. Kumārila in his Tantravārttika under Jaimini-Sūtra 1.3.24: prayogotpattyaśāstratvāt śabdesu na vyavasthā syāt has a long discourse on the purport of the term sadanga as qualifying veda in the above quoted injunction. In course of the discussion he has quoted the views of the opponents who try to show the non-validity of the injunction on the ground that it makes no sense. The Nirukta of Yaska, the Astadhyayi of Panini,-to name only the proto-types of two important ancillary sciences, are only the works of men who came at a much later period, while the Vedas are eternal. And it becomes prima facie implausible that the eternal and beginningless Veda should contain within its body reference to the auxiliary branches which are the handiworks of men and as such have a definite beginning. So the six angas referred to in the injunction do not concern any extraneous treatises not organically related to the Vedas—viz. man-made treatises. The Veda itself contains within its lore the germs of the above sciences and it is to them only that the injunction refers.¹ It is only too often that instances of etymologizing are met with in the Brāhmana texts.

From this dissertation it is evident that there was a school of opinion which regarded the Brāhmana literature as the source of the science of etymology or Nirukta and for the matter of that of all other sciences. The individual treatises, as of Yaska, are only based on the Brāhmanas. There is no denying the fact that the method of etymologizing as followed in the Nirukta was largely inspired by the derivations in the Brahmana works, and if we can pool all the etymological evidences scattered over in the extant Brāhmana works, notwithstanding the enormous loss of Brāhmana literature, we would be able to grasp the extent in which pre-Yaska Etymologists (Nairuktas) like Śākapūni, Aupamanyava etc., and even Yaska himself, were indebted to these works.2 Yaska in his Nirukta frequently cites Brāhmana passages in support of his etymologies and indicates their sources by stating iti vijnayate or iti hi Brahmanam. Professor Gune in his article Brahmana-quotations in Nirukta published in the Bhandarkar Commemoration Volume (pp. 43-45) had traced a good many citations in the Nirukta to their respective sources.

Under Nir. 1.14 the contention is raised against the method of etymologizing as adopted by Śākaṭāyana, the reputed grammarian who split up a single word into its constituent syllables and derived each of them from different roots.3 This, the opponents argue, is fantastic and proceeding too far. In justifying Śākatāyana's principle Durga cites a Brāhmana passage, in which a word is derived from more than one root and as such lends support to the procedure followed by Śākaṭāyana. For example, in Śatapatha Brāhmana XIV. 7.4.1 the trisyllabic word hrdaya is derived from three different roots -viz. hr from the root shr, da from v da and ya from vi. So Śakatayana cannot be blamed when he is following the Brahmanas that constitute the greatest authority in such matters.

VI. THE NIRUKTA—ITS RECENSIONS.

Professor Laksman Sarup, in the introduction to his edition of the Nirukta, has made it sufficiently clear that the Nirukta text has undergone much interpolation and that two distinct recensions are discernible amidst the extant texts of the Nirukta-the one longer and the other shorter, the latter being the basis of Durga's commentary. These two distinct versions can be traced even to Saunaka's Brhaddevatā. As Professor Sköld states: "Two of the passages quoted (viz. of the Nirukta) deserve to be specially mentioned, viz. N. 6, 5-BD. 6, I83; N. 7, 10—BD. 2, 4—5. In the former case the Brhaddevatā follows the longer recension of the Nirukta, in the latter case the shorter one." Apart from the question of relation between these two distinct recensions of the Nirukta text, there is still another important problem which deserves to be carefully investigated. It is whether the extant Nirukta is the genuine Nirukta of Yaska. The topic gathers importance in view of the fact that certain views which are attributed to Yaska by Śaunaka in his Brhaddevatā and in the anonymous Vārarucaniruktasamuccaya2 cannot be traced in the extant Nirukta, and what more in some places they are at variance with the opinions expressed in the extant Nirukta. Though Professor Sköld has already discussed the matter at some length, the materials of the Vararucaniruktasamuccaya had been left unutilised by him inasmuch as this work was not published till then. So I think it would be no mere repetition if we deal with the topic afresh with all its bearing on the history of the Nirukta text. We have already referred to the criticism of Śaunaka directed against Yāska for his being not in conformity with the teachings of the author of the Pada Text. We would not, therefore, revert to that topic and would cite only those passages in the Brhaddevatā in which Yāska is referred to by name and discuss whether the opinion ascribed to him can really be traced in the extant Nirukta.

I. In Bṛhadevatā I. 23ff. Śaunaka discusses the origin of names:—

tat khalvāhuḥ katibhyas tu karmabhyo nāma jāyate | sattvānām vaidikānām vā yadvānyad iha kimcana | | navabhya iti Nairuktāḥ purānāḥ kovayaśca ye | Madhūkaś Śvetaketuś ca Gālavaś caiva manyate | | nivāsāt karmano rūpāt mangalād vāca āśiṣaḥ | yadrcchayopavasanāt tathāmuṣyāyanācca yat | | caturbhya iti tatrāhur Yāska-Gārgya-Rathītarāḥ | āśiṣo'thārthavairūpyāt vācaḥ karmana eva ca |].3

Thus Yaska, along with Gargya and Rathitara (i.e. Śākapūṇi), holds that names originate in four distinct ways as against the Nairuktas, who recognise nine different ways of the origin of Vedic and secular names.4 But in the present Nirukta there is no definite statement that can testify to this view of Yaska as referred to in the Brhaddevatā. We might, however, gather from the Nirukta that Yaska was inclined to hold that names usually originate from "action" (karman), the last of the four sources of the origin of names attributed in the Brhaddevatā verse to Yāska, Gārgya and Śākapūni. For example, in Nir. I.13. we meet with the form kārmanāmika derived from karmanāma meaning "a name arising out of action". The Nirukta passage referred to above reads as follows :-

"athāpi ya eṣām nyāyavān kārmanāmikah saṃskārah, yathā cāpi pratītārthāni syuh, tathā anvācakṣīran | puruṣaṃ puriśaya ityācakṣīran, aṣṭé' tyaśvam, tardanam iti tṛṇam |."

Again, in Nir. V. 22 we meet with the expression āśīrnāmakaḥ, which testifies to the view that Yāska also held that āsīḥ or "prayer" is one of the factors that give rise to various appellations—a view, which, as we have seen, is attributed in the Bṛhaddevatā passage already cited to Yāska, Gārgya and Śākapūṇi. Yāska here shows the etymology of the word kitava (gambler):—

"kitavah kim tavāstīti sabdānukṛtih | kṛtavān vā āsīrnāmakah."

Durga, commenting on this passage, states:-

"athavā kṛtavān ayam yathā syāt—ityevam asau āśāsyate suhṛdbhir anyaih kitavaih sa hi | tasmāt evam āśāsanāt āśīrnimittanāmakah kitava evāsau babhūva."

Thus, we find that of the four different sources of names, which Saunaka refers to as being Yaska's view, we can with certainty trace only two in the extant Nirukta, the other two sources being not at all recorded in it.

II. In Brhaddevatā II. 136-37, Śaunaka states.

"nadīvat devatāvacca tatrācāryas tu Śaunakaḥ | nadīvat nigamāḥ ṣaṭ te saptamo netyuvāca ha | | ambyekā ca dṛṣadvatyām citra icca sarasvatī | iyam śuṣmebhir ityetam mene Yāskas tu saptamam | |"

Yāska states in his Nirukta that Sarasvatī is invoked in the Rgveda both as a stream and as a deity, but he does not enumerate the hymns in which Sarasvatī appears as a river of that name. Still it should be noted that the Nirukta cites the verse "iyam susmebhir" (RV. VI. 61.2) to illustrate that in the RV. Sarasvatī appears also as a river. From this it is difficult to infer whether Yāska viewed this verse as the seventh of that kind and regarded the other six verses referred to in Saunaka's work as being addressed to the river and not to the goddess. But from the trend of Saunaka's assertion it seems plausible that Yāska did enumerate the hymns addressed to Sarasvatī—the river. If this hypothesis is accepted we must be led to the irresistible conclusion that Saunaka was acquainted with some other version of the Nirukta text than what is presented before us, as it does not embody any such explicit enumeration.

III. In Brhaddevatā III. 100 Saunaka refers to Yāska's view that RV. I. 28. 1-4 have Indra and Ulūka as their deities. Kātthakya, too, concurs with Yāska, while Bhāguri, contrary to the view of Yāska and Kātthakya, thinks Indra to be the principal deity of the above four verses. Compare:

"parās catasro yatreti Indrolūkhalalyoh stutih | manyete Yāska-Kātthakyau Indrasyeti tu Bhāgurih | |"

But this view of Yāska is not traceable in the extant Nirukta, where however RV. I.28.5 is cited as a verse where Ulūkhala ('Mortar') is invoked as the principal deity.

IV. We now come to Brhaddevatā IV. 4-5ab where again Yāska is mentioned by name:

"athāgneye agim ityuttare yam pañcaindrani pra tad aindavy-rgatra | yuvam tam indrā-parvatau saha-stutau tvindram mena iha Yaskah pradhanam | | rksu stutah parvatavaddhi vajro dvivat stutav aindram ahuh pradhanam | |"

Thus according to Yāska, as cited in the above Bṛhaddevatā extract, in RV. I. 132.6: yuvam tam indrāparvatā paroyudhā | yo nah pṛtanyād apa tamṭamiddhatam | vajreṇa tamṭamiddhatam | though Indra and Parvata are together invoked in the expression Indrā-Parvatā in the dual, still Indra is predominant. But, strangely, neither the above verse is referred to anywhere in the Nīrukta nor is there any reference as to the deity invoked therein.

V. The next instance where Yāska's name occurs is to be found in Brhaddevatā, V. 8:

"vāyuh sunah sūrya evātra sīrah sunāsīrau vāyusūryau vadanti | sunāsīram Yāska indram tu mene sūryendrau tu manyate Śākapūnih | |"

Here Saunaka cites the views of different teachers on the meaning of the term sunāsīrau—the dual form. Some explain suna as vāyu and sīra as ādītya, so that the compound sunāsīrau refers to Sun and Wind. But, according to Yāska, if we accept the assertion of Saunaka, sunāsīra (singular) means Indra alone, while Sākapūņi explains suna as Sūrya and sīra as Indra. In the Nīrukta (IX. 40) the first interpretation is recorded⁸, but there is no trace of the explanation which in the Brhaddevatā extract is distinctly ascribed to Yaska. Professor Sköld remarks: "Śākapūņi (not mentioned by the Nirukta in this connection) holds the dual to mean Surya and Indra, a view unanimously professed by the Vedic commentators." The latter part of his statement which has been shown by us in italics is not true, for the view recorded in the first half of the Bṛhaddevatā verse cited above, as also in the extant Nirukta, is held by other authors as well. The author of the Kāsikā on Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī explains śunāsīrau as śunah vāyuh/sīra ādityah—a view which is identical with that recorded in the Nirukta.9 It is interesting to note that the interpretation which is ascribed to Yaska in the Brhadddevata, though it is not to be traced in the extant Nirukta, finds support in the statement of Aśvalayana, who is quoted by Haradatta, the author of the Padamañjarī, a commentary on the Kāsikā of Vāmana-Javaditya.10

VI. In Brhaddevatā V. 40 again Yāska is mentioned:

"...pra sustutir iti tvrci (RV. V. 42. 14) |
Śaunakādibhir ācāryair devatā bahudheritā |
idaspatim Sākapūnih parjanyāgnī tu Gālavah | |
Yāskas tu pūsanam mene stutam indram tu
Śaunakah | vaisvānaram Bhāguris tu.... | |"

Here the author of the Brhaddevatā records the divergent views of Vedic teachers regarding the deity invoked in RV. V. 42. 14. According to Yaska the verse is addressed to Pūsan, but in the extant Nirukta the verse referred to is not noticed, so that we are not able to verify the statement of the Brhaddevatā.

VII. In Brhaddevatā VI. 87, we again come across Yāska's name without the view ascribed to him being traceable to the extant Nirukta. The verse concerned is:—

"nipātam āha devānām dātā ma iti (RV. VIII. 65.10) Bhāguriḥ | rcam Yāskas trcam tvetam manyate vaisvadevatam | |"

Yaska's Nirukta does not contain the triplet alluded to in the above verse.

VIII. Saunaka in Bṛhaddevatā VI. 107 refers to the views of Yāska and Bhāguri according to whom the RV. hymn VIII. 91 embodies an ancient legend about Apālā, the female seer of the RV., while in Saunaka's opinion that hymn and the following two hymns (viz. RV. VIII. 92-23) as well glorify Indra. But it is strange that such a major point should not at all be touched upon in the Nirukta. It would be presuming too much if we hold that Saunaka was misquoting. Most probably an earlier version of the Nirukta, to which Saunaka had access, did contain some reference to the hymn in question. The verse referred to above runs as follows:

"itihāsam idam sūktam āhatur Yāska-Bhāgurī | kanyeti Śaunakas tvaindram pāntam ityuttare

ca ye | |"

It is interesting to note that Kātyāyana in his Sarvānukramanī records both these views without however alluding to the names of the respective teachers.

IX. Again, in Brhaddevatā VII. 38 Yāska is referred:—

"sāvitram eke manyante maho agne stavam param | ācāryah Śaunako Yāsko Gālavas cottarām rcam | |" In this verse Śaunaka states that according to Yāska and others Agni is invoked in RV. X.36.14. But this RV. verse is not cited in the Nīrukta.

X. In Bṛhaddevatā VII.69 Śaunaka quotes the conflicting views of Vedic teachers regarding the meaning of the term pañca-janāḥ which is frequently met with in the RV. Yāska's view is also quoted, which tallies with the assertion in the Nirukta, the only point of discrepancy being that the view of Aupamanyava as recorded in the Nirukta is ascribed to Śākaṭāyana in Śaunka's work.

XI. In Brhaddevatā VII.92-93, Saunaka cites the opinion of Yāska who thinks that the deity invoked in the last foot of the couplet RV. X.59.5-6(i.e. RV. X.59.6d) is Anumati, while others opine that in these two verses the deity praised is Asunīti. Yāska does not comment on RV. X.59.6 though the preceding verse is explained by him in Nir.X.39 as one addressed to Asunīti.¹¹

XII. Śaunaka states that Yāska held the RV. hymn X.95 beginning with haye jāye to be a dialogue between Purūravas and Ūrvaśī. But though Yāska quotes verses from this hymn in his Nirukta, he nowhere mentions his view as to the character of the hymn. Śaunaka's verses are:—

"āhvānam prati cākhyānam itaretarayor idam | samvādam manyate Yāska itihāsam tu Śaunakaḥ | haya iti...." —Bṛhaddevatā, VII.153-54.

Professor Macdonell notes in his comments on these verses: "This view cannot be gathered from Nirukta V.13; X.46-47; XI.36."

XIII. In Brhadevatā VIII.65 Śaunaka asserts that Yāska considers Indra and Agni to be addressed in the hymn X.161. But in the Nirukta the hymn is nowhere cited. Compare;—

"aindragnam manyate Yaska eke lingoktadevatam" —BD. VIII.65.

In the foregoing pages we have discussed the views which have been attributed to Yāska by Saunaka, and have shown that the extant Nirukta does not contain any statements that might correspond to these views. As Professor Sköld has summed up: "What is thus taught about Yāska in the Bṛhaddevatā? In two cases (BD. I.126 and V.8) Yāska is opposed to the Nirukta or the Nairuktāḥ. In seven cases the doctrines attributed to Yāska are more or less traceable to the Nirukta, though three out of these cases are somewhat dubious (BD. II.111 sqq; II.132 dubious; II.74b sqq.; III.112b B text; IV.18 B text, dubious; VII.7; VIII.11 dubious). In ten cases doctrines attributed to Yāska by the Bṛhaddevatā are not found in the Nirukta (BD. III.100; IV.4b; V.40; VI.87a; VI.107; VII.38; VII.68sqq; VII.93; VII.153; VIII.65a)."12

We must now discuss the nature of quotations from the Nirukta contained in the Vārarucaniruktasamuccaya.

(i) The author commenting on RV. V.39.6: "mitrasya carṣanīdhṛtah"-iti remarks: "mitro madhyamasthānadevatāsu pathitatvāt madhyamasthānatvena niruktaḥ | dyusthāno'pi mitro'sti | sa iha nirucyate." Dr. C. Kunhan Raja, the editor of the work, notes that nowhere in the Nirukta Mitra is stated to be a deity belonging to the highest region. But this statement seems to have been due to an oversight on his part. For, though Mitra has been read in the Nighantu (V.4) as an atmospheric deity and not as a celestial one, still in the Nirukta we have explicit assertions of Yaska himself that Mitra might be invoked as a deity of the celestial region. As he states in Nirukta II.13:—

- "evam anyāsām api devatānām ādityapravādāḥ stutayo bhavanti | tad yathaitam mitrasya varunasyā'ryamno dakṣasya bhagasyā'mṣ'asya—iti | athāpi mitrāvarunayoḥ."
 - (ii) On the same verse the author states:—
 "prakaranasāmarthyāt iha tejomayam mandalam
 ucyate | tathā ca-prakaranaśa eva viniyoktavyā iti
 Bhās yakāravacanam."
- Dr. C. Kunhan Raja comments on this statement: "Usually in the literature of Vedic interpretation, Bhāṣya means the work of Yāska beginning with samāmnāyah samamnātah. And Bhāṣyakāra is Yāska. But this passage is not found in the Nirukta." Dr. Raja has here perpetuated the mistake committed by Dr L. Sarup, the editor of the Nirukta with Skandasvāmin's commentary. For, the statement underlined above occurs with slight variations in Skanda's commentary on Nirukta VI.22:

"āśvamedhika iti prakaraṇam anusārayati (anusmārayati?) | prakaraṇam api arthābhivyaktau alam ityabhiprāyaḥ | tathā ca śāstrāntare vakṣyati- prakaraṇaśa eva mantrā nirvaktavyā'—iti."

Professor Sarup notes in a footnote that the quotation underlined is not met with in the Nirukta or elsewhere. As he observes:

"anupalabdham idam." The learned Professor was probably misled by the erroneous reading sastrantare, which should be sastrante. Had he cared to verify the authenticity of the citation he would have certainly been able to trace it to Nir. XIII.12 where the statement occurs verbatim:—

"na tu prthaktvena mantrā nirvaktavyāḥ | prakaranaśa eva tu nirvaktavyāḥ."

The citation of the author of the Vārarucaniruktasamuccaya has to be slightly emended so as to be in conformity with the actual statement of Yāska-viz. tathā ca prakaranaśa eva nirvaktavyā iti Bhās yakāravacanam.

(iii) On p.30 of the above work the author states:

"kṛṣṇena iti daśatayīsu pāṭhaḥ | tathā sati kṛṣṇaṃ kṛṣater nāśārthasya | tama-āder nāśayitā."

This derivation of kṛṣṇa is not met with in the Nirukta, where it is explained as—"kṛṣṇaṃ kṛṣyateḥ | nikṛṣṭo varṇaḥ." Most probably, the author is here quoting the view of some other Niruktakāra.

(iv) On p.32 again the author derives the term ātman:—"atter dhātor ātma-sabdo niruktah", "ātman has been derived from the root vad." But by whom? Not by Yāska. For in Nir.III.15, Yāska notes the possible etymologies of the word in the following extract: "ātmā atater vā, āpter vā, api vā āpta iva syat | yāvadnyāptibhūtah-iti." But the derivation recorded by the author of the above work is not to be found there. Here, too, another Nirukta text might have been the source of this derivation. 13

(v) A very important case is to be found in another statement of the Niruktasamuccaya:—

"sūnarah...padakāreņa etat padam nāvagrhītam | tathāpi bhāsyakāravacanāt padakāram anādrtya etan niruktam."

We fail to trace the word sūnaraḥ in the extant Nīrukta, and yet Bhāṣyakara in the above extract certainly refers to Yāska as it has been exemplified in other cases. This points to the existence of a different version of Yāska's Nīrukta.

(vi) On p.67 the author cites another statement of Yāska which too is not traceable to the extant Nirukta:—

"udakam api hiranyam ucyate iti Bhāsyakāravacanāt."

These evidences bearing upon the text of the Nirukta can lead us to any of the following alternative conclusions which have been noted by Dr. Kunhan Raja: "It may be that there was a larger recension of the Nirukta of Yāska and these references may be from that recension. Or it may be that the references are to other Niruktas which were available to the author and which are now lost to us. It may also be that the references are only to certain vedic commentaries and not to Niruktas. Whatever be the position, the sources of these statements are not traceable now."14

Notes

- 1. Op.cit., p.94.
- Edited by Dr. C. Kunhan Raja.
- 3. "As to that, indeed, they say: 'from how many actions does a name arise, whether of Vedic beings or any other (name occurring) here?' 'From nine', say the etymologists, and the ancient sages Madhūka, Śvetaketu, and Gālava think so too: (viz.) that which (comes) from abode, action, form, luck, speech, prayer, from accident, as well as addition and extraction. With regard to that (question,) Yāska, Gārgya, and Rathītara say, 'from four: prayer, from the diversity of objects, from speech, and from action"—Macdonell's Translation.
- 4. Is it possible, as appears prima facie from the above citations, that Yāska was not a Nairukta teacher? Compare Sköld, op. cit., on this question.
- Compare: nadīvat devatāvacca asyā nigamā bhavanti—Nirukta.
- 6. See Professor Macdonell's note on this verse: "The Sarvānukramaņī follows Bhāguri, as it makes no statement about these four stanzas (which means that Indra is the deity: asya sūktasya anādeśa indro devatā, Ṣadguruśisya."—loc. cit.

- 7. We should here note that Parvata is invoked along with Indra. Compare Nirukta VII. 10, where he is mentioned along with many other deities who share common offerings with Indra: "athāsya saṃstavikā devā agniḥ, somo, varuṇaḥ, pūṣā, bṛhaspatir brahmaṇaspatiḥ, parvataḥ, kutso, viṣṇur vāyuḥ."
- śunāsīrau / śuno vāyuḥ / śu eti antarikṣe / sīra ādityaḥ saraṇāt—loc. cit.
- The dual form sunāsīrau occurs in Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī in the sūtra: "dyāvāpṛthivī-sunāsīra-marutvad-agnīṣomavāstospati-gṛhamedhāc cha"—IV. 2.32.
- 10. anye tu ekam eva śunāsīram indrasya guṇam manyante / yathā'ha Āśvalāyanaḥ—''Indro vā śunāsira iti / mantralingam ca bhavati- 'Indram vayam śunāsīram asmin yajñe havāmahe'-iti"— Medical Hall Edn. Benares. 1898. Vol. II. p. 132.
- 11. It is to be noted that Kātyāyana in his Sarvānu-kramaņī does not refer to the view ascribed to Yāska in the Bṛhaddevatā, though the other view is recorded by him in the statement: "pra tārīti (RV. X. 59) daśarce catasro nirṛtyapanodanārtham jepuś caturthyām somam ca stutavān mṛtyor apagamāya uttarābhyām devīm asunītim..."
- 12. Op.cit., p. 102.
- 13. It is interesting to note that in Sureśvara's Bṛhadāraṇyakabhāṣ yavārttika, ātman is derived among others from the root √ad also. Cp. "yaccāpnoti yadādatte yaccātti viṣayān iha / yaścāsya santato bhāvas tena cātmeti giyate."

VII. AUTHORS OF THE NAIRUKTA SCHOOL MENTIONED IN YĀSKA'S TEXT.

We have at the very outset referred to the fact that Yāska's is not the only Nirukta. Nay, if Durga's assertion is to be believed, there were fourteen Nairukta texts¹ just as in the traditional view Grammatical Science has eight orthodox systems.² We should now, in this section, try to collect as much information about Yāska's predecessors as would be permitted by the evidence of the Nirukta and other allied works. The names are arranged in alphabetical order.

- I. ĀGRĀYAŅA—He is quoted in the following cases:—
 - (i) karnah kṛntateḥ | nikṛttadvāro bhavati | ṛcchater i'y-Āgrāyaṇaḥ rcchantīva khe udagantām iti ha vijñāyate—Nir. 1.9.
 - (ii) nīsatyau satyasya pranetārau ity-Āgrāyanah—Nīr. VI, 13.
 - (iii) indra idam karanāt ity-Āgrāyanah—Nir. X.8.

These three are the only references to \bar{A} grayana in the extant Nirukta. The $Brhaddevat\bar{a}$ is totally silent about this author.

II. AUDUMBARĀYANA—This teacher is cited only once and in the very first section of the Nirukta:—

"indriyanityam vacanam ity-Audumbarāyanah" — Nir.I.1.

It is not possible to say with accuracy as to whether he was a Nairukta teacher or a philosopher of the Mīmāṃsā school.

- III. AUPAMANYAVA—He is frequently cited by Yaska in the Nirukta. The cases of occurrence are being noted below:—
 - (i) nighantu—"te nigantava eva santo nigamanāt nighantava ucyante - ity - Aupamanyavah" —Nir.I.1
 - (ii) dandah—"damanāt ity-Aupamanyavah" II.2.
 - (iii) paruṣe—"bhāsvati ity-Aupamanyavaḥ"—Nir. II.6.
 - (iv) rsih—"stomān dadarša ity-Aupamanyavah" —Nir.II.11
 - (v) pañcajanāḥ—"catvāro varṇāḥ niṣādaḥ pañcamaḥ ity-Aupamanyavaḥ" - III.8.3
 - (vi) kutsaḥ—"kartā stomānām ity-Aupamanyavaḥ"—III.11.
 - (vii) kākaḥ—"na sabdānukṛtir vidyate ity-Aupamanyavaḥ" - III.
 - (viii) yajnah—"bahukṛṣṇājina ity-Aupamanyavah" -III.19.
 - (ix) "sipivisto visnur iti visnor dve nāmanī bhavataḥ | kutsitārthīyam pūrvam bhavati ity-Aupamanyavaḥ" - V.7.
 - (x) kāṇaḥ—"vikrāntadrasana ity-Aupamanyavaḥ" -VI.30.

- (xi) vikatah—"vikrāntagatih ity-Aupamanyavah" VI.30.
- (xii) Indrah—"idam dar'sanāt ity-Aupamanyavah"- X.8.

From these references it is not implausible to posit that Aupamanyava was a teacher of renown belonging to the Nairukta school. Probably he composed a separate Nighantu of his own, as it has been conjectured by Professor Bhagavaddatta on the strength of Nir. V.7, where it is explicitly stated that according to Aupamanyava Śipivista and Visnu are the two appellations of the same deity, the first having pejorative significance. It is interesting to note that Aupamanyava was a radical etymologist and went even so far as to derive words which are commonly held to be onomatopoetic like kāka etc. from various obscure roots. Professor Bhagavaddatta notes that Dr. G. Oppert has recorded on p.510 of the second volume of his Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts a work entitled Nirukta by Upamanyu. It may be that future researches would bring into light the existence of such a work. The Caranavyūha - a work on the Vedic schools also records a section of the Carakas (the Black Yajurveda sect) called "the Aupamanyavas". It is possible that there might be some sort of connexion between this Black Yajurveda sect and the author of the Nirukta as testified by Yaska's evidences.

- IV. AURNAVĀBHA—His name occurs in the following places:—
 - (i) ūrvyaḥ—ūrnoteḥ | vṛṇoter ity-Aurnavābhaḥ -II.26.
 - (ii) nāsatyau—satyau eva nāsatyau ity-Aurņavābhaḥ VI.13.
 - (iii) hotāram—hvātāram | juhoter hotā ity-Aurnavābhah - VII.1.
 - (iv) aśvinau—aśvair aśvinau ity-Aurnavābhaḥ -XII.1.
 - (v) tridhā nidhatte padam—samārohane visnupade gayaśirasi - ity-Aurnavābhah - XII.19.

It appears from these references that Aurnavābha had his own Nirukta where the etymologies (i) to (iv) were shown. The last citation points to the fact that Aurnavābha also explained RV.I.22.17: "idam viṣnur vicakrame". In the Bṛhaddevatā Aurnavābha is referred to only once by Śaunaka:

"Aurnavābho dvyrce tasmin asvinau manyate stutau" —Op.cit., VII.125.

"According to Aurnavābha Asvins are the deities invoked in the two Rk. verses - viz. RV. X.85.18-19".4

V. KĀTTHAKYA—All the references to Kātthakya are contained in Chaps. VIII and IX of the Nirukta, where his view is cited regarding the nature of the deities of the different Aprī hymns. There is no evidence however in the Nirukta that can testify to the view that Kātthakya was a Nairukta or etymologist. For, Yāska never cites him concerning the etymology of words. It would become plain from the citations below that Kātthakya was probably a great teacher versed in the sacrificial lore, for his interpretations that are actually referred to in the Nirukta are invariably in terms of rituals or ritualistic implements. Compare:—

(i) idhmah—yajñedhma iti Kātthakyah-Nir. VIII.5.

- (ii) tanūnapāt—ājyam iti Kātthakyaḥ-VIII.5.
- (iii) narāśansaḥ—yajña iti Kātthakyaḥ-VIII.6.
- (iv) dvārah—yajne grhadvāra iti Kātthakyah-VIII.17.
- (v) vanaspatiķ—yūpa iti Kātthakyaķ-VIII.10.
- (vi) devī jostrī—sasyam ca samā ca iti Kātthakyah-IX.41.
- (vii) devi ūrjahutī—šasyam ca samā ca iti Kātthakyah—IX.42.

Kātthakya has been mentioned once in the Bṛhaddevatā along with Yāska. Cp. "parās catasro yatreti (RV. I.28.1-4) indro-lūkhalayostutih | manyete Yāska-Kātthakyau indrasyeti tu Bhāgurih | |" -III.10. It is to be noted, as has been truly remarked by Professor Bhagavaddatta, that this verse too endorses the conjecture that Kātthakya was a Ritualist, for ulūkhala ('mortar') is a sacrificial implement.

VI. KAUTSA—Kautsa's name is referred to by Yāska in Nir. I.155 in connection with the controversy as to whether Vedic mantras convey any meaning or not. Kautsa was an extremist and would not admit that Vedic mantras are significant. The arguments advanced by him are virtually the same as those put forth in Jaimini's Pūrvamīmāmsā, though Kautsa is not cited as the originator of that dispute in the latter work. Most probably Kautsa was a Mīmāmsā teacher6 and not an etymologist, for in no other place does Yāska cite his views.

VII. KRAUSTUKI—Kraustuki's name is to be found only once in the Nirukta under VIII.2, where Yāska quotes his view in connexion with the interpretation of the term dravinodas:

"tat ko draviņodāḥ? Indra iti Krauṣṭukiḥ". Śaunaka also in his Bṛhaddevatā quotes Krauṣṭuki in IV.137:

"somapradhānam etam tu Kraustukir manyate stutim |

divas cit iti pancarce somenendrah stutah saha | |"
"Kraustuki regards this praise (viz. RV.IV.
28) to be chiefly addressed to Soma."

There is a Paurānic tradition to the effect that Krauṣṭuki was another name of the sage Bhāguri. The commentators of the Saptaśatī too notices this tradition. So Kraustuki-Bhāguri seems to have been the full name of Kraustuki. But Yāska does not quote him as such, and though in Śaunaka's Brhaddevatā Bhāguri is quoted, yet there is nothing to prove the identity of these two teachers.

VIII. GĀRGYA—Gārgya is cited three times in the Nirukta—

- (i) uccāvacāh padārthā bhavantīti Gārgyah-1.3. Gārgya holds against Śākaṭāyana⁹ that prepositions (upasargas) like pra, parā etc. are significant and convey meanings independently of substantives and verbs.¹⁰
- (ii) "tatra nāmāni ākhyātajāni iti Śākaţāyano nairuktasamaya's ca | na sarvāniti Gārgyo vaiyākaranānām caike."—I.12¹¹.

Yāska cites the objections which Gārgya advanced against Śākatāyana's theory of the radical origin of all substantives and then refutes them one by one.

(iii) "athāta upamāḥ | atat tatsadṛṣam iti Gārgyah | tad āsām karma."

Gārgya, the celebrated author of the Padatext of the Sāmaveda-Samhitā, is in the opinion of Professor Bhagavaddatta identical with the Nairukta teacher whom Yāska cites in the Nirukta. For, from the evidences gathered above we know that Gārgya thought the prepositions to be significant by themselves, and the author of the Pada-text too must have entertained the same opinion inasmuch as in his Padapātha he throughout shows the prepositions as separate and independent words, while the author of the Padapātha of the Rk-Samhitā is not at all systematic in this respect. For example, Gārgya in his Padapātha shows viprāsah as vi | prāsah, sūnrta as sū | nrta, while both these words are left intact by Śākalya. Gārgya's name occurse only once in Śaunaka's Brhaddevatā in connexion with the origin of appellations:

"caturbhya iti tatrāhur Yāska-Gārgya-Rathītarāḥ | āśiṣo'thārthavairūpyād vācaḥ karmaṇa eva ca | |"
-I.26.

Pāṇini in his Aṣṭādhyāyī quotes Gārgya frequently. The sūtras in which he is recalled are: (i) "aḍ Gārgya-Gālavayoḥ" (VII. 3. 99); (ii) "oto Gārgyasya" (VIII. 3. 20); and (iii) "nodātta-svaritodayam a-Gārgya--Kāṣyapa-Gālavānām" (VIII. 4. 97). In the Brahmānḍa-Purāṇa I. Chap. 35, we read:—

"Bāṣkalistu Bharadvājas tisraḥ provāca saṃhitāḥ |
trayas tasyābhavañ chiṣyā mahātmāno guṇānvitāḥ ||
dhīmānsca Tvāpanīpas ca Pannāgārisca buddhimān |
tṛitīyas cārjavas te ca tapasā saṃsitavratāḥ | |
vītarāgā mahātejāḥ saṃhitājñānapāragāḥ | | ityete bahvṛcāḥ proktāḥ saṃhitā yaiḥ pravar-ttitāh / /"12

Here it is stated that Pannāgāri¹³ alias Gārgya was the disciple of Bāṣkali Bharadvāja.¹⁴

IX. GĀLAVA—Gālava is referred to only once by Yāska under Nir. IV. 3. Here Yāska cites the divergent views of the different teachers like Śākapūṇi, Taiṭīki etc. concerning the meaning of the term śitāman¹⁵, which according to Gālava means "omentum"— "sitimānsato medastaḥ iti Galāvaḥ". Gālava is also quoted by Śaunaka in his Bṛhaddevatā in four places:—

(i) "tat khalvāhuḥ katibhyas tu karmabhyo nāma jāyate |
sattvānām vaidikānām vā yad vānyad iha
kiñcana | |
navabhya iti nairuktāḥ purānāḥ kavayaś
ca ye |
Madhūkaḥ Śvetaketuś ca Gālavaś caiva
manvate |—Bṛhaddevatā, I. 24-25.

(ii) idaspatim Sākapūnih parjanyāgnī tu Gālavah"—V. 30.

(iii) "pausnau preti pragāthau dvau manyate Śākatāyanah | aindram evātha pūrvam tu Gālavah pausnam uttaram | |"—VI. 43.

(iv) "sāvitram eke manyante maho agne stavam param | ācāryāḥ Śaunako Yāsko Gālavaś cottamām rcam | !" We are to note that in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali there are references to a Vedic school, probably of the Sāmaveda, called "the Gālavas", that might have originated after the name of the first teacher—Gālava, just as Carakāh was formed after Caraka alias Vaisampāyana, the renowned preceptor of the Black Yajurveda school.16 For example, on Varttika I7 under Pāṇini I. 1. 44: "ācāryadesasīlane ca tadviṣayatā", Patañjali comments: ācāryadeśaśīlanena yad ucyate tasya tadvisayatā prāpnoti | "iko hrasvo" nyo Gālavasya" (P. VI. 3. 61), "prācām avrddhāt phiñ bahulam'' (P. IV. 1. 160) iti Gālavā eva hrasvān prayunjīran prākṣu caiva $bhi\widetilde{n}$ syāt." Some however interpret Gālavāh as referring to the followers of the grammatical system propounded by Galava, but it is more natural to take this term to refer to the sect of Gālavas, just as allied terms like Sākalāḥ, Carakāh, Vāṣkalāh are taken to refer to the followers of a particular Vedic school. If this view is accepted, it becomes evident that Galava was a very ancient teacher and the propounder of a distinct recension of the Samaveda. Galava is also regarded as the author of the Kramapātha of the Rgveda. In the Mahābhārata, Śāntiparvan, Ch. 342: vv. 103-I04, we meet with the following information about the personality of Galava:

"päñcālena kramaḥ prāptaḥ tasmāt bhūtāt sanātanāt | Bābhravyagotraḥ as babhau prathamaḥ krama-

pāragaḥ / /

"Nārāyaṇād varaṃ labdhvā prāpya yogam

anuttamam |

kramam pranīya sikṣām ca pranayitvā sa Gālavaḥ |]"
Here we are also informed that the self-same Gālava was also the author of a work on Phonetics (sikṣā). That Gālava was the author of the Krama-text of the Rk-Samhitā is also attested by a statement of the Rk-Prātisakhya of Śaunaka:

"iti pra Bābhravya uvāca ca kramam"—Op. cit. XI 65.17

- X. CARMAŚIRAS: this teacher is mentioned only once in Nir. III. 15: "vidhavā vidhātṛkā bhavati, vidhavanāt vā, vidhāvanāt va—iti Carmaśirāḥ". In Śaunaka's Bṛhaddevatā his name is not to be found.
- XI. TAIŢĪKI—Yāska quotes twice Taiṭīki's views in his Nīrukta:
 - (i) ŝitāma—syāmato yakṛtta iti Taitīkiḥ—IV. 3.
 - (ii) bīriṭam—Taiṭīkir antarikṣam evam āha—
 V. 27.¹⁸

Saunaka does not record any view of Taitiki.

XII. VĀRṢYĀYAŅI—Vārṣyāyaṇi is cited only once in the Nirukta in the first chapter in connection with possible modifications undergone by every being:

"ṣaḍ bhāvavikārā bhavanti—jāyate, asti, viparinamate, vardhate, apakṣṣṣyate, vinaśyati iti | ato'nye bhāvavikārāḥ eteṣām eva vikārā bhavanti iti ha smāha"—Nir. I. 2.

Patañjali in his Bhāṣya on P. I. 3. 1 quotes this passage verbatim except that he prefixes the honorific bhagavān before Vārṣyāyaṇi's name, which shows that he was an ancient and much respected teacher.¹⁹

XIII. ŚATABALĀKṢA MAUDGALYA—He is cited in connection with the derivation of the term mṛtyu: "mṛtyur mārayatīti sataḥ | mṛtaṃ cyāvayatīti vā Śatabalākṣo Maudgalyaḥ"—Nir. XI. 6. In the Bṛhaddevatā Maudgalya's name is not found though Mudgala and Mudgala Bhārmyaśva are cited there:

"tasmāt sā devatā tatra sūryam eke pracakṣate | Madgalaḥ Śākapūṇiś ca Ācāryaḥ Śākaṭāyānaḥ | |" —VIII. 90

"Mahān Aindram pratnavatyām agnim vaisvānaram stutam |

manyate Śākapūņis tu Bhārmyaśvaś caiva

Mudgalah | |'-VI. 46.

XIV. SĀKAṬĀYANA—Śākaṭāyana, according to Yāska's statement, was a grammarian. 20 As he states: "tatra nāmāni ākhyātajānīti Śākaṭāyano nairuktasamaya's ca"—I. 12. We have also noted above Śākaṭāyana's view regarding the prepositions: "na nirbaddhā upasargā arthān nirāhur iti

Sākatāyanah | nāmākhyātayostu karmopasamyogadyotakā bhavanti"—I. 3. That Śākatāyana was also the author of a Nirukta work is probable. For, in the Nirukta, in course of the dispute between Gārgya and Śākatāyana as to the radical origin of all vocables, it is stated:

"athānanvite'rthe aprādeśike vikāre padebhyaḥ padetarārdhān saṃcaskāra Sākaṭāyānaḥ | eteḥ kāritaṃ ca yakārādiṃ ca antakaraṇam, asteḥ śuddhaṃ ca sakārādiṃ ca"—I. 13.21

From this it becomes evident that Śākaṭāyana had composed an etymological treatise in which he showed the derivation of the term satya in the way recorded in the above extract. We may note in this connection that Śākaṭāyana in his list enumerated three more prepositions—accha, śrat, and antar, besides those commonly recognised as such-viz. pra, parā etc. Śaunaka in his Bṛhaddevatā II.95 has recorded this particular view of Sākaṭāyana

"accha śrad antar ityetän nipātān Śākaṭāyanaḥ | upasargān kriyāyogān mene te tu trayo'dhikāḥ | |" Pāṇini also did virtually recognise accha and antar as upasargas in terming them as gatis in the sūtras "accha gatyarthavadeṣu"-I.4.69 and "antar aparigrahe"-I.4.65 respectively. Kātyāyana in his Vārttika under the latter extends the field of the indeclinable antar where it undergoes the operations that are enjoined in connection with upasargas: "antaḥśabdasyān-kividhi-natveṣūpasaṃ-khyānam." Though Pāṇini had nowhere in his system recognised śrat as a preposition, Kātyāyana in his Vārttika 5 under P.I.4.59 teaches the indeclinable śrat as an upasarga: "śracchabdasyopasaṃkhyānam".

Śākaṭāyana has been frequently quoted by Śaunaka in his Bṛhaddevatā. We cite below the verses in which he has been mentioned by name.

āha caivāsya dvau stomau āśrayau Śākaṭāyanaḥ /

yaś ca pańcadaśo nāmnā samkhyayā

trinavas ca yah / |-- Op.cit. II.1.

Yāska in his Nirukta allots the pañcadaśastoma to Indra, though he does not refer to Śākaṭāyana's view: "athaitānīndra-bhaktīni.... pañcadaśa-stomah"—VII. 10. In the following section the trinava-stoma too is referred to the gods of the atmospheric region of which Indra is the representative deity: "eteṣveva sthānavyūheṣu rtu-cchandaḥ-stoma-pṛṣṭḥya-bhaktiśeṣān
anukalpayīta | ...hemantaḥ panktiḥ triṇavastomaḥ
śākvaraṃ sāma-ityantarikṣāyatanāni | "—VII. 11.

(ii) "Indrena jāyāpatyoścetihāsam dvyrce'smin (RV. I. 126.6-7) manyate Śākaṭāyanah"—Op.cit. III. 156a. "Śākaṭāyana thinks that in this couplet there is a story of a husband and wife (in connexion) with Indra. (Bṛhaspati gave his daughter Romaśā by name to King Bhāvayavya)."

(iii) "divas cit (IV.30.9-11) iti caitena

trcenendrena samstutam |

Uṣasam madhyamām mene ācāryah Śākatāyanah | |"-Op.cit. IV.137b-138a.

Sākatāyana, thus, thought that in the triplet -viz. RV. IV.30.9-11, Middle Dawn is praised along with Indra. Yāska in his Niruka XI.47-48 cites the two verses RV.IV.30.10-11, and it seems that as Vāyu is described in these two verses, Uṣas here refers to the Dawn of the Middle region. Durga's comments make the point clear:

"tasyā eṣā aparā bhavati | sā punaḥ kimartham? uttamā (-pi) hyuṣā ādityasamśrayā bhavati | iyam tu madhyamā meghasamśrayā vāyoḥ samstavāt iti madhyamasvabhāva-prāyovrttyupapradarśanārtham"—ibid. p.1094. Skandasvāmin has also similar observations. Thus it is evident that Yāska here follows Śākatāyana though he does not explicitly mention his name.

(iv) "Pauṣṇau preti (VIII.4.15-18) pragāthau dvau manyate Śākaṭāyanaḥ |

Aindram evātha pūrvam tu Gālavah pausnam uttaram | |"—Op.cit. IV.43.

(v) "Yaskaupamanyavau etan ahatuh pañca vai janan |

niṣādapañcamān varṇān manyate Śākaṭāyanaḥ | |"-Op.cit.VII.69. We have already discussed the opinions of Vedic teachers concerning the implication of the compound pañca-janāḥ so frequent in the Vedas, and how Yāska in his Nirukta confounds the two views of Aupamanyava and Sākaṭāyana, the latter's opinion being ascribed to the former. Vide Nirukta III.8.

(vi) "pretītihāsa-sūktam tu manyate

Śākatayanah |

Yāsko drughaņam aindram vā vaišvadevam tu Śaunakah | |"-Op.cit. VII.1i.

Thus, according to Sākaṭāyana the hymn X.102 is narrative in character, while Yāska explains it as one addressed to Drughaṇa ('Mallet') or Indra and Śaunaka to Vaiśvaveva. See Nirukta IX.23.

(vii) "āyam gaur iti yat sūktam Sarparājnī

svayam jagau |

tasmāt sā devaṭā tatra Sūryam eke pracakṣate | | Mudgalaḥ Śākapūṇiś ca ācāryaḥ Śākaṭāyanaḥ | tristhānādhiṣṭhitāṃ vācaṃ manyate pratyṛcaṃ

stutām | |"-Op.cit. VIII.89b-91a.

Thus, Śākaṭyana along with Mudgala and Śākapūṇi regards Vāc in all her three aspects—viz. terrestrial, atmospheric and celestial, as the deity invoked in each of the single verses of the hymn X.189. As Yāska does not cite any verse from this Rgvedic hymn it is not possible to verify this statement of Saunaka.²⁴

XV. ŚĀKAPŪŅI—Śākapuni is the most frequently quoted Nairukta teacher in the Nirukta. There are numerous evidences to show that Śākapūṇi was the author of an etymological work. Besides the quotations from Śākapūṇi's Nirukta treatise cited by Yāska himself, external evidences too are not wanting that decidedly point to the conjecture stated above. Sākapūṇi had also a surname Rathītara, which is met with in the Bṛhaddevatā. The following quotations would leave no doubt as to Sākapūṇi's authorship of a Nirukta work, now lost:

(i) provāca saṃhitās tisraḥ Śākapūṇī
Rathītaraḥ |
Niruktaṃ ca puna's cakre caturthaṃ
dvijasattamaḥ | |
---Brahmāṇḍa-Purāṇa. Part I. XXXV. 3 and Vāyu-Purāṇa. LX. 65.

(ii) Rathītaro niruktam ca punas cakre caturthakam | Vāyu-Purāna. LXI. 2.

(īīī) Samhitātritayam cakre Sākapunī Rathītaraḥ | Niruktam arakot tattu caturtham munisattama | |

Kraunco Vaitālakis tadvat Bālākas ca

mahāmatih /

Niruktakrt caturtho'bhūt vedavedānga-

pāragaḥ | |

-Visnu-Purāna. III. 4. 23-24.

Thus, besides being an author of a Nirukta work Sākapūņi also commented on the three Vedic Samhitās.

Yāska cites Sūkapūņi's views twenty times in the Nīrukta. We record here these occurences:

- (i) tadit—vidyut tadit bhavatīti Sākapūņiķ
 - ---III. 11.
- (ti) mahān—mānena anyān jahātīti Śākapūņiḥ —III. 13.
- (iii) rtvik—rgyastā bhavatīti Śākapūniķ—III.19.
- (iv) sitām-yonih sitām iti Śākapūņih-IV. 8.
- (v) vidradhe nave drupade arbhake—kanyayor adhisthāna-pravacanānīti Śākapūṇiḥ —IV. 15.
- (vi) sarve kṣiyatinigamā iti Śākapūṇiḥ (referring to the Rk verses X. 89.3; IX. 107.9; and X. 28.4)—V.3.
- (vii) apsarāḥ—spaṣṭaṃ darśanāya iti Śākapūṇiḥ
 —V. 28.
- (viii) accha-abher āptum iti Śākapūnih-V.28.
 - (ix) agnih—tribhya ākhyātebhyo jāyate iti Śākapūnih—VII.14
 - (x) tredhā—prthivyām antarikse divīti Śākapūnih —VII. 28 and XII. 19
 - (xi) dravinodāḥ—ayam evāgnir dravinodāḥ iti Śākapūṇiḥ—VII. 3.
 - (xii) idhmaḥ-agnir iti Śākapūniḥ-VIII.
- (xiii) tanunapāt—agnir iti Śākapūnih—VIII. 5.
- (xiv) narāśamsaḥ-agnir iti Śākapūniḥ-VIII. 6.

(xv) dvārah—agnir iti Śākapūṇih—VIII.10.

(xvi) tvastā—agnir iti Śākapūnih—VIII.14

(xvii) vanaspaţiḥ-agnir iti Śākapūṇiḥ-VIII.17

(xviii) vanaspatiķ-agnir iti Śākapūniķ-

VIII.12.

(xix) yadeva viśvalingam iti Śākapūṇiḥ—XII.40

(xx) akṣaram—om ityeṣā vāk iti Śākapūṇiḥ—

XIII.10.

From the above citations it becomes evident that Śākapūṇi in his Nirukta interpreted the terms dravinodāh, idhmah, tanūnapāt, etc. as synonyms of Agni.

It has been already shown that every Nairukta teacher had his own Nighaṇṭu text on which his exegesis was based. As Śākapūṇi had his own Nirukta, it is plausible that it was based on a Nighaṇṭu text compiled by his own self. And this hypothesis is rendered certain if we consider some important external evidences pointing to the same direction:

I. Skandasvāmin in his commentary on Nirukta I. 4 observes: "dāśvān iti yajamānanāma Śākapūninā paṭhitam". This shows that Śākapūni read dāśvān as a synonym of "sacrificer" (yajamāna) in the Nighantu compiled by himself. Skandasvāmin in his commentary on RV.VI.62.3 follows Śākapūni's view and regards dāśvān as another name of the yajamāna: dāśvān iti yajamānanāma.

adopted by the author of the Nighanțu in enumerating the appellations of the deities of the atmospheric region (antarikṣa-sthāna). We quote here the following portion from Durga's commentary:

"vyākhyātāni pṛthivīsthāna-devatāpadāni | adhunā samāmnāyānukramenaiva madhyamasthānadevatāpadāni nirvaktavyāni | tadartham idam ārabhyate | athāto madhyamasthānā devatā iti | ..madhyamam sthānam etāsām iti madhyamasthānā devatāh vāyvādayah | vaksyante iti vākyasesah | devatā iti bahuvacanam bhedapakse | ekaiva | Nairuktānām devatā-tritvābhyupagamāt ekasyaiva madhyamasya paryāyavacanāni etāni vāyvādīni rodasyantāni gunaviśesato bhavanti | yathaiva uttamasya jyotiso drśyante savity-bhaga-prabhytīni | tāsām vāyuh prathamāgāmī bhavati | nanu indra iti madhyamasya sthanasya mukhyam abhidhanam | tat prathamam samamnatavyam āsīt | na | madhyamasya varsakarmopalaksanatvāt varsakarmani ca vāyor adhikārah prathamah syāt | katham iti | vāyvātmanaiva hi madhyamah ūrjān māsāt paratah sārvadikam udakam upasamharan osadhi-vanaspati - jalāśayebhya udakam antariksalokasya garbham upacinoti | sa māsāstakena sambhṛtodakagarbho vipakvah prāvrsam prāpya prasavāya prakalpate | taduktam-

"vānti parņašuso vātās tatah parņamuco" pare | tatah parņaruho vānti tato devah pravarsati | |"

"tadevam varsakarmaprārambhe vāyvātmanaiva madhyamo vyāpriyate iti yuktam vāyvabhidhānam iha prathamam samāmnātam iti | itas ca yuktam yaducyate-tāsām vāyuh prathamāgāmī bhavatīti | sa eşa sambhrtadakagarbho vāyuh vivrnvan meghajālena nabhah madhyamo Varunah sampadyate | tato rudad Rudrah | tata irām dadat Indrah | tato rasān prārjayan Parjanyah | evamādir madhyamasya jagadanugrahaya varsapradanasiddhaye gunopajanakramah | anayaiva gunopajanakramānupūrvyā Vāyuh, Varunah, Rudrah, Indrah, Parjanyah-ityevamādyā samāmnāye devatānām ānupūrvī | tadetat sphutam dyusthāne gunāntaropajanānupūrvyam jyotirmandalasya savity-prabhrtisu '".25

Most probably Durga took his cue from the now lost Nirukta of Śakapūni which embodied comments, on the evidence of the author of the Vārttika (i.e. the Niruktavārttika) cited by him, on the sequence of the vocables and appelations of deities as observed in Nighantu works.

We cite below those verses from Śaunaka's Bṛhaddevatā where Śākapūṇi alias Rathītara has been distinctively mantioned:

(i) "tat khalvāhuh katibhyas tu karmabhyo
nāma jāyate |
sattvānām vaidikānām vā yadvānyad iha
kiñcana | |
caturbhya iti tatrāhur Yāska-GārgyaRathītarāh |

II. We meet with the following statements in Skandasvāmin's commentary on Nirukta III.10: "vyāptikarmāna uttare dhātavo daśa | invati | nakṣati | ādayaḥ | Śākapūner atiriktā ete—vivyāka | vivyāca | uruvyacāḥ | vivre | iti vyāptikarmānaḥ." Thus we have the testimony of Skandasvāmin, the earliest known commentator of the Nirukta of Yāska to the effect that Śākapūṇi in his Nighantu compilation enumerated four additional vocables, viz. vivyāka, vivyāca, uruvyacāḥ and vivre having the same meaning as invati, nakṣati etc. viz. "to pervade", which have been embodied in Yāska's compilation.

III. Ātmānanda in his Bhāṣya on RV. I.164.40 observes: "udakam iti sukhanāma iti Śākapūniḥ" 24.

Durga in his commentary on Nir. VIII.5 explicitly states that Śākapūṇi in his Nirukta gave arguments in favour of the necessity of observing the sequence followed in compiling the vocables of the Nighaṇṭu:

"Śākapūṇis tu pṛthivīnāmabhya eva upakramya svayam eva sarvatra kramaprayojanam āha | taduktam Vārttikakārena:

'kramaprayojanam nāmnām Śākapūnyupalaksitam | prakalpayet anyad api na prajnām avasādayet | |' —iti |''

Again, in the beginning of his commentary on Nir. X.1 Durga tries to justify the order āšiṣo' thārthavairūpyāt vācaḥ karmaņa

eva ca / /"26

-Op. cit. I. 23, 26.

(ii) "ekādasyā tu nāsatyau dvādasyāgnim

imam punah |

pṛthak-pṛthak-stutīdam tu sūktam āha

Rathītaraḥ / /''27

-Op. cit., III. 40.

According to Rathītara Śākapūṇi the RV. hymn I. 15 consists of separate praises and is an invocation to the All-Gods, while in the 11th and 12th verses of this hymn Nāsatyau (Aśvins) and Agni are invoked respectively.

(iii) "Jātavedasyeti sūktasahasram eka
Aindrāt pūrvam Kasyapārsam vadanti |
Jātavedase sū tam ādyam tu tesām
ekabhūyastvam manyate Śākapūniḥ | |"
—Op. cit., III. 130.

"Some say that the thousand hymns addressed to Jātavedas (which come) before the (hymn) addressed to Indra (I.100) have Kaśyapa as their seer: the first hymn of these is 'For Jātavedas' (jātavedase: I. 99). Śākapūṇi thinks that they increase by one (in the number of their stanzas)."

(iv) "sampravādam Romasayendra-rājnor ete rcau manyate Śākapūnih |"

-Op. cit., III. 155.

According to Śākapūṇi the couplet consisting of two verses—viz. RV. I. 126. 5-6, is a conversation between Romaśā on the one hand and Indra and King Bhāvayavya on the other.

(v) "śunāsīram Yāska Indram tu mene sūryendrau tu manyate Śākapūnih |"

-Op. cit. V. 8.28

(vi) "İdaspatim Śākapūṇiḥ parjanyāgnī tu Gālavah."—V. 39.

In Śākapūṇi's opinion Idaspati is the deity invoked in RV. V. 42. 14, while Yāska and other teachers held different views.

(vii) "mahān aindram pratnavatyām agnim vaisvānaram stutam manyate Śākapūnis tu Bhārmyasvas caiva Mudgalah | |"

-0p. cit., VI. 46.

In the verse 30 of the hymn RV. VIII. 6 beginning with the word pratna Śākapūṇi and Mudgala think that Agni Vaiśvānara has been invoked. But other teachers opine that the hymn as a whole is an invocation to Indra.

(viii) "āyam gaur iti yat sūktam Sārparājñī svayam jagau |

tasmāt sā devatā tatra sūryam eke pracakṣate | |

Mudgalaḥ Śākapūṇiś ca ācāryaḥ Śākatāvanah /

tristhānādhisthitām vācam manyate pratyrcam stutām |--Op. cit., VIII. 89b-91a.

"As to the hymn 'Hither this bull' (āyaṃ gauh: X.189), Sārparājñī sang of herself (in it). Therefore she is the deity in it; some declare Sūrya (to be the deity). Mudgala, Śākapūṇi, and the teacher Śākaṭayana, consider that Vāc, as occupying the three spheres, is (here) praised in every stanza."²⁹

It is to be noted that though the former two views are recorded in the Sarvānukramaṇī, Śākapūṇi's view has not been referred to in that work.³⁰

(ix) "Yāskaupamanyavau etan āhatuḥ pañca

vai janān |

niṣādapañcamān varṇān manyate Śākaṭayanaḥ | | Ritvijo Yajamānam ca Śākapūnis tu

manyate |"-VII.69-70

Thus according to Śākapūṇi the expression pañcajanāḥ, so frequent in the Vedas, refers to the four Vedic priests and the sacrificer himself.

(X) "āpāntamanyur ityaindryām stutah somo'tra drsvate |

sālokyāt sāhacaryāt vā stūyate soma eva vā | | nipātabhājam somam ca asyām Rathītaro'- bravīt |"---Op.cit. VII.143.145.

"In the stanza addressed to Indra, 'He who gives zeal when imbibed' (āpāntamanyuh: X.89.5), Soma is clearly praised. Soma is praised either because he belongs to the same world or because he is Indra's companion.³¹ Rathītara has said that in this (stanza) Soma is incidental; for in (hymns) addressed to Indra there is here (such) incidental mention."32

Thus we have exhaustively discussed the evidences bearing on the character of Śākapūṇi's Nirukta and the views expressed there in in so far as they can be gathered mainly from Yāska's Nirukta, Śaunaka's Brhaddevatā and Durga's commentary on Yāska. But there are a few more facts that throw additional light on Śākapūṇi's work and we propose to discuss them below.

Skandasvāmin in his Bhāṣya on RV. VI.61.2 observes:

"tathā ca Śākapūṇinā nadyabhidhāyinaḥ sarasvatīśabdasya pariganane—'athaiṣā nadī | catvāra eva tasya nigadā bhavanti—(i) dṛṣadvatyām manuṣā apayayam sarasvatyām revadagre dīdihi (RV. III.
23.4); (ii) citra id rāja rājaka idanyake yake sarasvatīm anu (RV.VIII. 21.18); (iii) imam me gange yamune sarasvati (RV. X.75.5); (iv) sarasvatī saranyūḥ sindhur ūrmibhiḥ (RV.X.64.9); pancamam apyudāharanti—(v) ambitame nadītame
(RV.II.41.16) | atrāyam na ṣaṣṭhaḥ parigaṇita iti".

Thus Śākapni regards only five verses—viz. III.23.4; VIII.21.18; X.75.5; X.64.9; and II.41.16 as addressed to Sarasvatī—the River, while in all other verses she is addressed as a deity. But Yāska thinks that RV.VI.61.2—"iyam susmebhir bisakhā ivārujat", is an invocation to Sarasvatī—the Stream, and Śākapūni demurs on this point. Durga too while commenting on RV.VI.61.2 cited by Yāska in Nir. II.24 seems to repudiate Yāska's view, for he remarks:

"asyam r-i tavisebhir ürmibhih paravataghnim ityetad viśesalingam nadīsattvam paśyatā Bhāsyakārena "athaitannadīvat" ityuktvā iyam rgupāttā sarasvatīśabdasya nadyabhidhāyakatve | iyam punar Maitrāyanīyake—"utasyanah sarasvatī"—ityasya sadarcasya uttamā | etacca punaķ sadarcānukramena paśvanukramena ca-"sarasvatīm dhenustarīm ālabheta yah ksetre pasusu vā vivadeta" -ityetasya paśoh sampadyate | seyam anena prakāreņa sārasvatasya pasuhaviņo yājyā bhavati | evam ca satīyam api devatāvad ityeva samupapadyate na tu adevatā ijyate | tad evam krtvā Bhāsyakārena yaduktam "tad devatāvad uparistād vyākhyāsyāmah, athaitad nadīvat iti"—tad virudhyate | tatroktah samādhih-vibhavo auupaksīnaśaktayo mantraśabdāh | pradarśanamātram etat kriyate | sarvathaiva mantrasabdanam yo'rtha upapadyate sa yojyo yathasambhavam iti | devatāpakse viniyogānuvidhānābhiprāyena sarasvatī mādhyamikā vāk | sā girīnām meghānām sānūni bhanjayatyūrmibhih pārāvāre dyāvaprthivyām hantīti yojanīyam/"33

Skandasvāmin also notes this discrepancy between Yāska's interpretation and the explicit ritual application that views Sarasvatī the Goddess as the deity invoked therein. Compare:

"yadyapi ceyam sārasvatasya pasoḥ sadṛce 'ā no dive' (RV.V.43.11) 'pāvīravī' (RV.VI.49.7), 'imā juhvānā' (RV.VII.95.5), 'yaste stanaḥ' (RV. I.164.49), 'sarasvatyabhi no neṣi' (RV.VI.61.14), 'iyaṃ suṣmebhiḥ' (RV.VI.61.2) ityuttamā yājyā paṭhitā, tayā devatā ijyate | tathāpi codanāprakaraṇād devatānām 'ūrmibhiḥ pārāvataghnīm' iti nadīrūpatvaṃ lingāt | prakaraṇācca lingaṃ balavat—iti Bhāṣyakārābhiprāyaḥ | ato nadīrūpeṇānena sarasvatī stūyate...evaṃ tāvannadīrūpeṇānena sarasvatī stūyate...evaṃ tāvannadīrūpeṇābhidhānam | yadā lingād api viniyojakasrutibalīyastvāt yājñikapakṣe devatābhidhānam, tadā nadyā adhiṣṭhātrī sarasvatītyucyate | tulyaṃ nirvacanam | ''34

Ātmānanda, a commentator of the Rk-Saṃhitā, states in his commentary on RV. I.165.14: "cakraṃ jagaccakraṃ bhramatīti vā caratīti vā karotīti vā cakram iti Śākapūṇiḥ"—which evidently points to the existence of Śākapūṇi's Nirukta.

Professor Bhagavaddatta conjectures that Śākapūṇi was the author of another Vedic work besides the Nirukta, on the evidence of an observation of Bhatta Bhāskara, the renowned commentator of the Taittirīya Samhitā. Compare:

"dvitīyādi-navāntesu anuvākesu namaskārādinamaskārāntam ekam yajur iti Śākapūniķ."

Śākapūṇi's son who is referred to as Rāthītara in Vedic exegetical treatises was also a great Nairukta teacher. Yāska once cites his name in the Nirukta: āditya iti putraḥ Śākapūṇeḥ—XIII. 11. He is also quoted by Śaunaka in his Bṛhaddevatā in the following verse:

"prasangād iha yaḥ sūkte devatāḥ parikīrttitāḥ | tā eva sūktabhājas tu mene Rāthītaraḥ stutau | |" —Op. cit., V.142.

- XVI. STHAULĀṢṬHĪVI—Sthaulāṣṭhīvi is another Nairukta teacher mentioned by Yāska. He is cited twice in the Nirukta.
- (i) agniḥ kasmāt?...aknopano bhavatīti Sthaulāṣṭhīviḥ | na knopayati na snehayati—Nir. VII.14.
- (ii) vāyuḥ....eter iti Sthaulāṣṭhīviḥ | anarthako vakārah—Op. cit., X.1.

In Sthaulāṣṭhīvi's opinion $v\bar{a}yu$ is derived from the root \sqrt{i} —to go, with the sound v—inserted at the beginning.

Sthaulāsthīvi has not been referred to by Saunaka in his Brhaddevatā.

 "vedāngānām ekaikam anekaprabhedam / tadyathāniruktam caturdaśaprabhedam / vyākaranam astaprabhedam"—p. 150 (BSS. Edm.). I.13. Also: "katham punah samāmnāsisuh / sukhagrahanāya vyāsena samāmnātavantah / tadyathā ekavimsatidhā bāhvrcyam...vedāngānyapi / tadyathā—vyākaranam asṭadhā / niruktam caturdasadhā-ityevamādi /"

 Comp: "Indras Candraḥ Kāsakṛtsn-Āpisalī Śākaṭāyanaḥ / Pāṇiny-Amara-Jainandrā jayantyaṣṭādisāb-

- Compare: "Yāskaupamanyavāvetān āhatuh pañca vai janān / niṣādapañcamān varṇān manyate Śākaṭāyanaḥ / /" —Bṛhaddevatā, VII.69.
- 4. Yāska cites RV.X.58.19. In this verse the Moon is invoked, but some also hold that the second half of the verse is addressed to the Sun: ādityadaivato dvitīyah pāda ityeke—two deities being thus praised in a single verse. It is to be noted that according to some Aśvins represent the Sun and the Moon (sūryā-candramasau ityeke). If this view be accepted the verse referred to would be really an Āśvina verse. But we should note that Aurnavābha did not subsribe to this view.
- Yadi mantrārthapratyayāya, anarthakam bhavatīti Kautsah.
- Āpastamba Dharmasūtra cites Kautsa's view in I. 28. 1.
 Compare: "yathā kathā ca paraparigraham abhimanyate steno ha bhavatīti Kautsa-Hārītau tathā Kāṇva-Pauṣkarasādī".
- "Mārkandeyena Kraustukim Bhāgurim prati uktam stotram Jaiminim prati paksirūpaih muniputraih uktam Markandeyapurāne"—Nāgeśa's Prayogavidhi.
- Bhāguri is not cited by Yāska. Bhāguri is mentioned in the following places in the Bṛhaddevatā: III.

- 100 (see supra); vaiśvānaram Bhāguris tu—VI. 86cd; itihāsam idam sūktam āhatur Yāska-Bhāgurī—VI. 107ab.
- "na nirbaddhā upasargā arthān 9. nirāhur iti Śākaṭāyanaḥ / nāmākhyātayos tu karmopasamyogadyotakā bhavanti"—loc. cit. It seems that Patañjali was a follower of Śākaţāyana in this respect, for he too holds that prepositions can convey meanings only when they accompany verbs etc. Compare; "samo' yam arthasabdena saha samāsah / sam copasargah / upasargās ca punarevamātmakāh yatra kaścit kriyāvācī sabdah prayujyate tatra kriyāviścsam āhuh / na ceha kaścit kriyāvācī śabdah prayujyate yena samah sāmarthyam syāt..." -Mahābhāsya, Vol. I. p. 365. (Kielhorn's Edition).
- 10. "ekaikopyeṣām prādīnām nāmākhyātaviyogepi anekārthā ityabhiprāyaḥ / tad yathā—'pretyādikarmodīrņa-bhṛśārthesu'—ityabhidhāne śaktirasti ityevamādyupalakṣitavyam lakṣaṇaśāstre"—Durga, loc. cit.
- 11. It becomes evident from this passage that Gārgya was a teacher of the Nairukta school. Compare the comment of Durga on the passage: "nairuktānām caiṣa samayaḥ siddhāntaḥ sarveṣām, aviseṣeṇa Gārgyavarjam." Also—"na sarvānīti Gārgyo Nairuktaviśeṣaḥ"—Skanda's commentary.
- Noticed in p. 542 of the treatise entitled "Vyākaraņa Daršaner Itihās" in Bengali by Gurupada Haldar.
- Pannāgārāh, the patronymic in plural, is met with in the Kāśikā on P. IV. 2. 66: bahvaca iñah prāycabharateşu.
- Bharadvāja is cited by Yāska only once under Nirukta, VI. 30.

- 15. We are to note that Yāska merely quotes here the different opinions without committing himself to any particular view. Compare Saunaka's critique on this point: "padajātir avijñātā tvaḥpade'rthaḥ sitāmani"—Bṛhaddevatā, II. 114.
- 16. "caraka iti Vaisampāyanasyākhyā / tatsambandhena sarve tadantevāsinah Carakāh ityucyante"— Vāmana-Jayāditya's Kāsikā under P. IV. 3. 104: "kalāpivaisampāyanāntevāsibhyas ca".
- See Uvata's comment thereon: "Babhruputrah-17. Bhagavān Pāñcālah." "In Vātsyāna's Kāmasūtra there is a reference to a school called Babhraviyas: "dṛṣṭapañcapuruṣā nāgamyā kācidastīti Bābhravīyāh." Jayamangala's (sic) gloss thereon deserves notice: "rcām daśatayīnām samiñitatvāt ihāpi tadarthasambandhāt pañcālasambandhācca bahvṛcair esā pūjārtham samjñā kṛtā ityeke". From these extracts it can be reasonably inferred that this Babhravya was perhaps identical with the Bābhravva who is reputed to have arranged the Rgvedic Samhitā into Astakas. From the first citation it seems that it particularly refers to Draupadi who had five husbands. Draupadi's another name was Pancali, as she was the daughter of the king of Pancalas. So the school of Babhravivas flourished perhaps in the country of the Pañcālas."-H. C. Chakladar: Studies in Vatsyāvana's Kāmasūtra.
- 18. Durga, who records every word of the Nirukta in his commentary, does not mention Taitīki in connection with the derivation of the word bīriṭa. So the reading is dubious..
- 19. Compare Brhaddevatā, II. 121-122.

- 20. Compare also: "nāma ca dhātujam āha nirukte / vyākarane śakatasya ca tokam"—Mahābhāṣya. In the Kāśikā under P. I. 4. 86 Jayāditya gives—"anu Śākatāyanam vaiyākaranāh" as an illustration. This also serves to show that Śākatāyana was held in high esteem by the ancient grammarians. We have noted that Patañjali in his Mahābhāṣya as also Kātyāyana in his Vārttikas subscribes to the view of Sākatāyana that the prepositions are not capable of conveying any meaning independently.
- 21. "Again, Śākatāyana derived parts of one word from different verbs, inspite of the meaning being irrelevent, and of the explanatory radical modification being non-existent, e.g. (explaining satya) he derived the latter syllable regular from the causal form of (the root) i (to go), and the former syllable sat from the regular form of (the root) as (to be)."—Laksman Sarup's Translation.
- 22. Patañjali explains the Vārttika as follows: "antah-sabdasya ānkividhi-samāsa-natvesūpasamkhyānam karttavayam / ān-antardhā / kividhih-antardhih / samāsah-antarhatya / natvam-antarhanyāt gobhyo gāh"—Op. cit., Vol. I. p. 344. In the Kāśikā under I. 4. 65 the above Vārttika is read as—"antah-sabdasya ān-kividhi-natvesu upasargasamjñā vaktavyā".
- 23. Haradatta in his Padamañjarī notes that the abovementioned Vārttika can be dispensed with. For, though Pānini does not enumerate śrat as an upasarga still the formation of the word śraddhā by the suffix ān which is the sole reason for regarding śrat as an upasarga has indirectly been taught by Pānini himself as he uses the form śraddhā in the

- gaņa bhidādi and in the sūtra V. 2. 101; "prajñā-śraddhā-rcāvṛttibhyo ṇaḥ". Cf. "bhidādipāthāt prajñā-śrāddheti-nipātanāt vā siddham"—Op. cit.. Vol. I. p. 319.
- 24. Kātyāyana in his Sarvānukramanī however notes: "sārparājñī ātmadaivatam sauryam vā"—the latter view corresponding with that referred to in the Bṛhaddevatā quotations by eke.
- 25. Op. cit., pp. 952-53.

VIII. NIRUKTAVĀRTTIKA—A LOSTTREATISE.

It is much to be regretted that the anonymous work Niruktavārttika, quotations which so frequently occur in the commentaries of Durga and Skandasvāmin, is not extant. From the nature of the citations it is evident that it was a critical exposition (vārttika) of the Nirukta dealing with all the important problems of the text as well as a running commentary on it. Durga cites verses from this work with great deference, and it is quite apparent that the work was held as an authority in his days on all obscure topics relating to etymology. discovery of the work would, no doubt, greatly facilitate the study of the Nirukta, which is so very abstruse, by throwing light on the history of etymological inquiries and on the proper construction and interpretation of Yaska's text. We propose to discuss here all the available materials bearing on this important treatise.

(i) Durga in his commentary on Nir. I. 1 quotes the Vārttika in approval of the view that a substantive might be derived from as many roots as might bear resemblance—both in sound and in meaning, to it. Thus the term nighantu has been derived by Yāska in so many different ways—viz. from $ni-\sqrt{han}$, $ni-\sqrt{gam}$, $ni-\sqrt{hr}$ etc. inasmuch as all these roots can be shown to have some or other affinity with the resultant vocable. We cite below the relevant portion from Durga's commentary:

"evam eṣa nighanṭu-śabdo gamer vā ekopasargāt hanti-haratibhyām vā dvyupasarvābhyām niruktaḥ | āha — kimayam punar atimahān yatna ekasmin abhidhāne anekadhātvarthanirvacankṛta iti | ucyate—iha tāvat sarvāni ākhyātajāni nāmānīti siddhāntaḥ | sati ākhyātajatve abhidheyasthā yā kriyā lakṣyate tadabhidhānasamarthe parokṣavṛttau vā tadabhidhāyini rūḍhiśabde vā dhātur utprekṣyate, sa ca punaḥ svaravarṇa-kriyāsāmānyena | tatraivam sati rūḍhiśabde yāvanto dhātavaḥ svalingam rūḍhigatam darśayanti tāvataḥ saṃgṛhya sa rūḍhiśabdo nirvācyaḥ | kim kāraṇam ?—viśeṣalakṣaṇavyavasthā'bhāvāt | nahi tatra viśeṣalakṣaṇavyavasthā kācit asti yayā eko'vatiṣtheta, anye vyāvartteran | api coktam Vārttikākareṇa—

- (ii) The following verse, cited by Durga under Nir. 1.8, seems to belong to that work though there is no specific mention to that effect. Durga states:
 - "vyatyayam cādhikrtya ślokam apyudāharanti—
 'ādimadhyāntaluptāni pracchannāpihitāni ca | brahmanah pariguptyartham vede vyavahitāni
 ca | | ' iti"
- (iii) The following verse too appears to have been taken from the Niruktavārttika—

"uktam hi-

'yas cānyāyena nirbrūyāt yas cānyāyena prechati | tayor anyataro mṛtyum vidveṣam vādhigacchati | |' (cited by Durga under Nir. II.3)—though it is a slight variation of Manu II. 111, which reads as:

"adharmena ca yah prāha yas cādharmena

prcchati |

tayor anyatarah praiti vidvesam vādhigacchati //"
(iv) "naighantukāns tu yānchabdān pratyartham

ganasah sthitan |

chandobhyo'nvisya tattvārthān nirbrūyād

yogatas tu tān | |"

The above verse appears in Durga's commentary on Nir.II.9. It is probable that the verse is a citation from the Niruktavārttika, though it is not decisive, since no such phrase as uktam ca or taduktam Vārttikakareņa has been used to introduce it.

(v) The following quotation too cannot be traced to any definite source—

"sadvidho hi dhatuh-

'prakrtyantah sanantas ca yañanto yanlug eva ca | nyanto nyantasanantas ca sadvidho dhātur ucyate / /"--Durga on Nir. 11.28.

(vi) Durga in his commentary on Nir. IV.1 cites a verse without mentioning its source. But the form and content of the verse point to the lost Vārttika as its probable source. We quote below the following excerpt from Durga's commentary in which it occurs:—

"ekārtham anckasabdam ityetaduktam | kimartham idam ucyate | nahi yadyadvṛttam tattad vaktavyam idam vṛttam idam varttiṣyate iti | yad yad vṛttam tattad anuktam api pratīyate, yacca vakṣyamāṇam iti | āḥa—saṃkṣepato nigamanāya yad uktam, yad vā vaktavyam pratijānītha samāsavistarābhyām hi sukham ādhastyam prakaraṇam avadhārayiṣyāmahe, gṛhītārtham saṃkṣepācca vistareṇa uttaragrantham ucyamānam sukham ava bhotsyāmahe | api coktam anyatrāpi—

(vii) As to the procedure adopted by the author of the Nirukta in explaining the vocables occurring in the Naigama-Kānda of the Nighantu, the author of the Vārttika states—

"kimlakṣaṇā punar iha vyākhyā iti? taducyate—

'tattvam paryāyasabdena vyutpattis ca dvayor api |

—Cited by Durga under Nir. IV. 1.

(viii) The verses quoted in the following portion of Durga's commentary also seem to have been taken from the Niruktavārttika:

"evam esa sitāmasabdo'navagatābhidheyo'navagatasamskāro'pi | evam etasmin prakarane anyāni anavagatasamskārāni upeksitavyāni | uktam hi—

- (ix) Another quotation from the Niruktavārttika occurs in Durga's commentary on Nir.

VI. 31, and Durga explicitly states that it is a citation from the Vārttika:

"idamyuh—ityanavagatam anekārtham ca | idam ti yat kiñcit abhipretam nirdišyate, tad yah kāmayate sa idamyur ityucyate | yur-ityeṣa śabdo'prasiddhah kāmayater arthe, tena anavagatam etat 'nānādhiyo vasūyavah' (Rv. (x) The following verse cannot be traced to any definite source. It might have plausibly occurred in the lost Vārttika:

"nānāvasthādarsanavad ākhyātṛṇām paridevananindādiṣvapi cendrādīnām kāmakāratas tadrūpam avasthitānām sā sā stutir eva na nindā | uktam ca—

Durga on Nir. VII. 7.

(xi) Durga cites another verse from the Vārttika under Nir. VIII. 4 in order to show that Śākapūṇi, the renowned etymologist, gave arguments in his lost treatise in favour of the order followed in the Nighaṇṭu texts regarding the compilation of the vocables.

Compare:

(xii) The verse occurring in the following extract from Durga's commentary is most probably taken from the Vārttika, though not explicitly stated as such:

"yainaṣamyogāt rājā stutim labheta | ..rājasamyogāt yuddhopakaraṇāni | ..sa eṣa vyāpī stutisamkramanyāya ācāryeṇopadarsitaḥ | tad yathā

"taduktam-

'vānti parņasuso vātās tatah parņamuco'pare | tatah parņaruho vānti tato devah pravarsati | |"

-iti"-Cited by Durga on Nir. X.1.

(xiv) The last citation from the Vārttika is found in Durga's commentary on Nir.XI.13. Compare:

"athāto madhyasthānā devaganāḥ | . . teṣāṃ marutaḥ prathamāgāmino bhavanti | kasmāt? vāyur eva hi bhedena apekṣyamāno marudabhidhāno bahuvacanabhāg bhavati | teṣāṃ prāthamyaṃ vāyunā vyākhyātam | etāvāṃstu viśeṣaḥ | bahusādhye karmaṇi bahudhā madhyamo bhavati | pṛthaktvena ca vijnātā marutaḥ śukrajyotiśca citrajyotiś ca ityevamādayaḥ saptasaptakā devaganāḥ māruteṣu gaṇeṣu saptakapāleṣu | agnau purāṇe caita eva prasiddhāḥ saptadhā vāyuvicāriṇaḥ mārīcāt kāśyapāt adityāṃ ye jajnīre | nairuktasamayas tu sārvā eva gaṇā marutaḥ | uktaṃ ca Vārttike—

Professor Rajawade states in his edition of the Nirukta (Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series) that the Vārttika cited by Durga is identical with the Brhaddevatā of Saunaka. The ground for this assertion is that some citations of the Vārttika correspond exactly with the Brhaddevatā verses. That some verses attributed to the Vārttikakāra are not to be found in the present Brhaddevatā can be explained on the hypothesis that Durga had access to a different recension of the Brhaddevatā which contained some additional verses and was apparently larger than the extant text. We record below the following statements of Professor Rajawade—

- (i) ayam śloko Brhaddevatāyām nopalabhyate | Brhaddevātākārāt nānyo Vārttikakārah |
- (ii) ayam śloko'dhunopalabdha-Bṛhaddevatāyām na vidyate /
- (iii) Durgakāle Brhaddevatāgranthe bhinnāh pāthāh āsan | adhikāś ca ślokāh | ca-ṭa-pustakayoh— "sarvā strī madhyamasthānā pumān vāyuś ca madhyamah | ganās ca sarve marutah iti vṛddhānuśāsanam |]"

-iti pāthāntaram prānte dīyate | |

But all these arguments of Professor Rajawade cannot stand in view of the fact that verses are quoted in a commentary called Gopālikā on the Sphotasiddhi of Maṇḍanamiśra, the great Mīmānsist teacher, which are all ascribed to the author of the Niruktavārttika, none of them being traceable to the extant Bṛhaddevatā. We quote here the following extract from the commentary Gopālikā for reference—

"yathoktam Niruktavārttika eva— ʻasākṣātkṛtadharmabhyas te parebhyo yathāvidhi | upadesena samprādur mantrān Brāhmanam eva ca | l' upadeśaś ca vedavyākhyā | yathoktam– ʻartho'yam asya mantrasya brāhmaṇasyāyam ityapi | vyākhyaivātropadeśaḥ syāt vedārthasya vivaksitah | |'--iti | upadeśāya glāyanta iti | upadeśena grāhayitum nyūnā dvitīyebhyo ityarthah apare aśakyā ityarthaḥ | bilmagrahaṇāya upāyato vaśīkaraṇāya | samāmnāsisuh vaksyamānam imam grantham samāmnātavantaḥ ' tam evāha vedam ca vedāngāni ceti | angasabdah upāngāder api upalaksanārthaḥ / vedam upadeśamātrāt grahītum aśaktāḥ angāni ca samāmnāsiṣuḥ—iti | yathoktam— 'aśaktās tūpadeśena grahītum apare tathā | vedam abhyastavantas te vedāngāni ca yatnatah ||'-iti | bilmasabdo hi anantaram eva tatra niruktambilmam bhilmam bhāsanam iti | vyākhyātam ca— 'bilmam bhilmam iti tvāha bibhartyarthavivakṣayā / upāyo hi bibhartyartham upeyam vedagocaram | | athavā bhāsanam bilmam bhāsater dīptikarmanah | abhyāsena hi vedārtho bhāsyate dīpyae sphuṭam | |yathoktam— 'prathamāḥ pratibhānena dvitīyās tūpadeśataḥ | abhyāsena trtīyās tu vedārthān pratipedire | |"

All these six verses are evidently taken from the Niruktavārttika and taken together they constitute an exposition of Nir. I.20 which reads: "sākṣātkṛtadharmāṇa ṛṣayo babhūvuḥ | te'sākṣātkṛtadharmabhya upadeśena mantrānt samprāduḥ | upadeśāya glāyanto'vare bilmagrahaṇāya imam grantham samāmnāsiṣuḥ vedam ca vedāngāni ca | bilmam bhilmam bhāsanam iti vā | |"

From the evidences noticed above it is quite obvious that the lost Vārttika was a highly valuable treatise, being at the same time an elaborate commentary as well as a critique on Yāska's text, thus truly satisfying the traditional definition of a Vārttika—viz. "uktānuktaduruktacintā Vārttikam".

Notes

- The emendations might have been introduced by the author of the Vārttika to suit the context of the Nirukta.
- The citation is most probably from the Niruktavārttika though Durga does not explicitly state it as such.
- 3. This verse is found in the Bṛhaddevatā of Śaunaka. Cf. BD. II. 108. But the two subsequent verses are not found therein. Thus it would not be sound to argue that the quotations are from the Bṛhaddevatā. Durga most probably cited all the three verses from the self-same work—viz. the Niruktavārttika. As to the question of correspondence between these two works vide ante.

4. Compare with the above extract from Durga Bṛhaddevatā II. 111 ff: "padam ekam samādāya dvidhā kṛtvā niruktavān / puruṣādaḥpadam Yāsko vṛkṣe vṛkṣa iti tvṛci / / anekam sat tathā cānyad ekam eva niruktavān / aruṇo māsakṛnmantre māsakṛdvigraheṇa tu / / padavyavāye'pi pade ekīkṛtya niruktavān / garbham nidhānam ityete na jāmaya iti tvṛci / / padajātir avijñātā tvahpade'rthaḥ śitāmani / svarānavagamo'dhāyi vane netyṛci darśitaḥ / / śunaḥśepam narāśaṃsaṃ dyāvā naḥ pṛthivīti ca / niraskṛtetiprabhṛtiṣvarthād āsīt kramo yathā / /"

IX. DIFFERENT SCHOOLS OF INTERPRETATION OF VEDIC MANTRAS AS RECORDED IN THE NIRUKTA OF YĀSKA

Yāska in his Nirukta frequently refers to the Aitihāsikas and Ātmavādins besides the Nairuktas as two principal schools of Vedic interpretation. The former endeavour to establish the historicity of the Vedic deities and consider the various incidents recorded in the Vedas as authentic facts. Thus, according to them the Aśvins, the twin-gods, were great kings of yore. The fight that is so often related in the Vedas between Indra and Vrtra has, according to the Aitihāsikas, a factual basis, and should not be explained away as an allegory as the Nairuktas would have it. But if the view of the Aitihāsikas be adopted one great difficulty presents itself before us. According to the opinion of orthodox scholars the Vedas are eternal and have no beginning. And the acceptance of the position of the Aitihāsikas would compromise the orthodox view. If the fight between the gods and demons be accepted as an historical incident, we must have to admit that it took place at some definite place and time, and this admission would strike at the very root of the view upholding the eternal character of the Vedas as the latter would be perforce subjected to a spatio-temporal limitation. This question engaged the attention of the Mimansists at an early date, and they had to refute such hostile arguments by means of still stronger ones.1 There is certainly room for doubt as to whether the Aitihāsikas shared the view of the orthodox scholars vouchsafing the ceaseless continuity of the Vedas. Skandasvāmin in his commentary on Nirukta does not fail to note this important fact. He distinctly states that the Itihasas or legends related in the Vedic mantras are to be interpreted figuratively, and the supposedly historical names should be understood to be standing for eternal cosmic phenomena. Yaska in Nir. II.10-12 explains the two verses—viz. RV. X.98.5, 7 from the Aitihāsika viewpoint as dealing with the legend of Devāpi and Santanu.2 But Skandasvamin offers an alternative explanation from the Nairukta standpoint that is in keeping with the eternal character of the Vedas. Compare:

"nityapakṣe ṛgdvayasya anyathā arthayojanā |
ārṣṭiṣenah madhyamah tatra bhavatvācca ārṣṭiṣenah vaidyutah, tasya pārthivātmāvasthitasya hotṛtvena

II. pp. 77-78.3

The following observations of Skandasvāmin should also be noticed in this connection:

(i) Nir. II. 25-27 deals with the dialogue between Viśvāmitra, the seer, and the Rivers, according to the Aitihāsikas. Yāska does not record the interpretation of the verses cited in this connection (viz. RV. VII. 33.5) from the Nairukta standpoint. But Skandasvāmin remarks:—

"nityapakṣe prāvṛṣi plāvitobhayakūlā nadīḥ sarvamitro bhagavān āditya adhyeṣatīva 'ramadhvam ma'-ityādi | deśaplāvanam mā'kārṣṭa, yajñānām saṃvyavahāryā bhavata iti jagataḥ pālanakāmaḥ | kraṃśateḥ—auṣasaḥ prakāśaḥ kauśikaḥ, kuśikasya prakāśasya sūnur aham ādityaḥ, tasya putrasthānīya ityarthaḥ"—Op. cit.

(ii) RV. I. 45.3 is quoted under Nir. III. 17 where Yāska states: "arciṣi Bhṛguḥ samba-bhūva". But this is the Aitihāsika view. Skandasvāmin interprets the verse from the Nairukta standpoint:

"nityapakse tu satatapravṛttayajñah kaścit yajamānah priyamedhā ucyate | tathā Bhṛgvādayo'pi yajamānaviśeṣā eva | Bhṛguh pañcatapahprabhṛtinā tapasā bhṛjyamāno'pi na dehe |...."— Op. cit., Pt. II. p. 180.

(iii) RV. I. 108 according to the Aitihā-sikas is uttered by Trita when he fell into the well. Compare: "Tritaḥ kūpe'vahitam etat sūktam pratibabhau'—Nir. IV. 6. But Skandasvāmin adopts the Nairukta view and explains it as follows:—

"nityapakṣe trito nāma śuklaśabdalakṣaṇaḥ karmapāśaiḥ triḥ svarga-naraka-martyeṣu baddhaḥ kaścit kṣetrajñaḥ | karma-jñāna-samuccayābhāvāt apavargam anāpnuvan narake ghaṭīyantraghaṭite saṃsāre bambhramyamāṇaḥ paridevayāñcakre |"—Op. cit., Pt. II. pp. 210-211.

- (iv) Again, Skandasvāmin does not accept the explanation of the Aitihāsikas that RV. X. 10 is a dialogue between Yama and Yamī—two historical personages. On RV. X. 10.8 cited by Yāska in Nir. V. 2 Skandasvāmin observes: "nityapakṣe tu Yama ādityaḥ Yamyapi rātrih | socyate iti..."—Op. cit., Pt.II.p. 294.
- (v) On the legend of Purūravas and Urvašī Skanda observes:

"atra ca nityapakṣe kecit ūrvaśī vidyut vāyuḥ purūravā iti manyante | sā ca ūru antarikṣam aśnute prabhayā | iha tu itihāsapakṣam āsthāya tasyā ūrvasyā daršanāt ityādi / tadarthābhidhāyinyesā"—Op. cit., Pt. II. p. 343.

(vi) On the legend of Saramā and Paņis (Nir. XI. 25 where RV. X. 108.1 has been cited) Skanda remarks—

"evam iyam ākhyānapakṣe yojanā | yadā tu mādhyamikā vāk Saramā tadaivam | anāvṛṣṭyā pīḍitaḥ nadantam stanayitnum upaśrutya sāsūyam mantradṛg āha |...."—Op. cit., Pt. IV. p. 75.

(vii) RV. X. 85.10 has been explained by Skanda from the Nairukta viewpoint, though Yaska in Nir. XII.8 records the Aitihāsika exposition of the verse:

"he sūrye usasah prabhaiva | iyam apī udayād ūrdhvam esaiva āvisṭakālatamā upacīyamānatara-prakāšā prāgarunodayāt sūryocyate, tasyāh sambodhanam | amṛtsaya udakanāmaitat | udakasya bhaumarasākhyasya lokam sthānam ādityam | āruhya ca syonam sukhanāmedam | sukham asmai patye patibhūtāya ādityāya vuhatum pravešam ityarthah | kṛṇuṣva | evam nairuktapakṣe yojanā | anairuktapakṣe—savitā svaduhitaram sūryām prāyacchat sūryāya rājñe prajāpataye vā | sā uhyamānā ucyate |"—Op. cit., Pt. IV. p. 105.

Thus in the view of the etymologists the so-called legends must have to be taken allegorically. The fight between Indra and Vrtra is a cosmical phenomenon and not an historical incident representing as it does the release of waters pent up within the clouds at sunrise or the removal of darkness by the effulgent rays of the sun. Yāska explicitly states: "tat ko vṛṭraḥ | ...megha iti Nairuktāḥ | ..apām ca jyotiṣaś ca miśrībhāvakarmano varṣakarma jāyate | tatropamārthena yuddhavarnā bhavanti |"—Nir. II.

16. It is interesting to note that in the Mahābhārata a very picturesque description is given of the fight between the gods and the demons from the Nairukta standpoint. We quote the following extract in the hope that it will serve as a happy illustration of Yāska's statement just cited:

"athāpasyat sa udaye bhāskaram bhāskaradyutim |

—Mahābhārata: Vanaparvan. Chap. 223
(Skanda-prādurbhāvādhyāya), vv. 11-19.
(Vangavāsī Edition. Calcutta.)

And yet it must be observed that the itihāsas or legends that the Legendarians or the Aitihāsika expositors read in the Vedic mantras were not the fabrications of their own imagination. All the legends are in the last analysis traceable to Brāhmanic arthavādas and as such are not self-authoritative, but they derive their authority from being construed with the respective injunctions. Skandasvāmin explicitly states under Nir. II. 16—"sarve itihāsās ca arthavādamūlabhūtāh | te cānyaparā vidhipratisedhaśesabhūtāḥ | tatas tān anādṛtya svayam aviruddham nityadarśanam upodvalayannāha—megha iti nairuktāḥ".—Op.cit., Pt. II. p. 93.

Durga too remarks that the itihāsas are inserted with the only object of conveying the ultimate truth and as such have to be taken cum grano salis and with proper discount:—

"yah kascit adhyatmika adhidaivika adhibhautiko

vā'rtha ākhyātate distyuditārthāvabhāsanārtham sa itihāsa ucyate | sa punar ayam itihāsah sarvaprakāro hi nityam avivaksitasvārthah | tadarthapratipattṛṇām upadesaparatvāt.'

-Op. cit., p. 1000. (BSS.Edn.).

Notes

- 1. Compare: Jaimini-Sutra I. 1.28 which represents the view of the heterodox scholars: 'anityadars'anācca'and Sabara's comm. thereon: "janana-maranavantas ca vedārthāh śrūyante | Babarah Prāvāhaņir akāmayata, Kusurubinda Auddālakir akāmayata-ityevamādayah Uddālakasyāpatyam Auddālakih / yadyevam prāg Auddālaki-janmano nāyam grantho bhūtapūrvah / evam api anityatā." Taimini refutes this view in the Sūtra I. i. 31: 'param tu śrutisāmānyamātram'-which has been explained by Sabara as follows: "yacca prāvāhaņir iti / tanna / Pravāhanasya purusasya asiddhatvāt na pravāhaņasya apatyam prāvāhaņih / praśabdah prakarse siddhah vahatis ca prāpaņe / na tvasya samudāyah kvacit siddhah / ikāras tu yathaivāpatye siddhas tathā kriyāyām api karttari / tasmād yah pravāhayati sa prāvāhanih / babara śabdanukrtih / tena yo nityo'rthah tam eva etau śabdau vadisyatah / ata uktam param tu śrutisāmānyamātram iti /."
- Compare: "tatretihāsam ācakṣate / devāpiś cārṣṭiṣeṇah śantanuś ca kauravyau bhrātarau babhūvatuh / sa śantanuh kanīyān abhiṣecayāñcakre / devāpis tapah pratipede / tatah śantanoh rājye

 Compare: "evam nairuktapakşe yojanā / aupacāriko'yam mantresu ākhyānasamayah / nityatvavirodhāt / paramārthena tu nityapakṣa eva iti Nairuktānām siddhāntah".—Vararuci's Nirukta-samuccaya.
